

You Can Depend On The Man Who Advertises

NINE times out of ten you will find that the man who advertises is the man who most willingly returns your money if you are not satisfied.

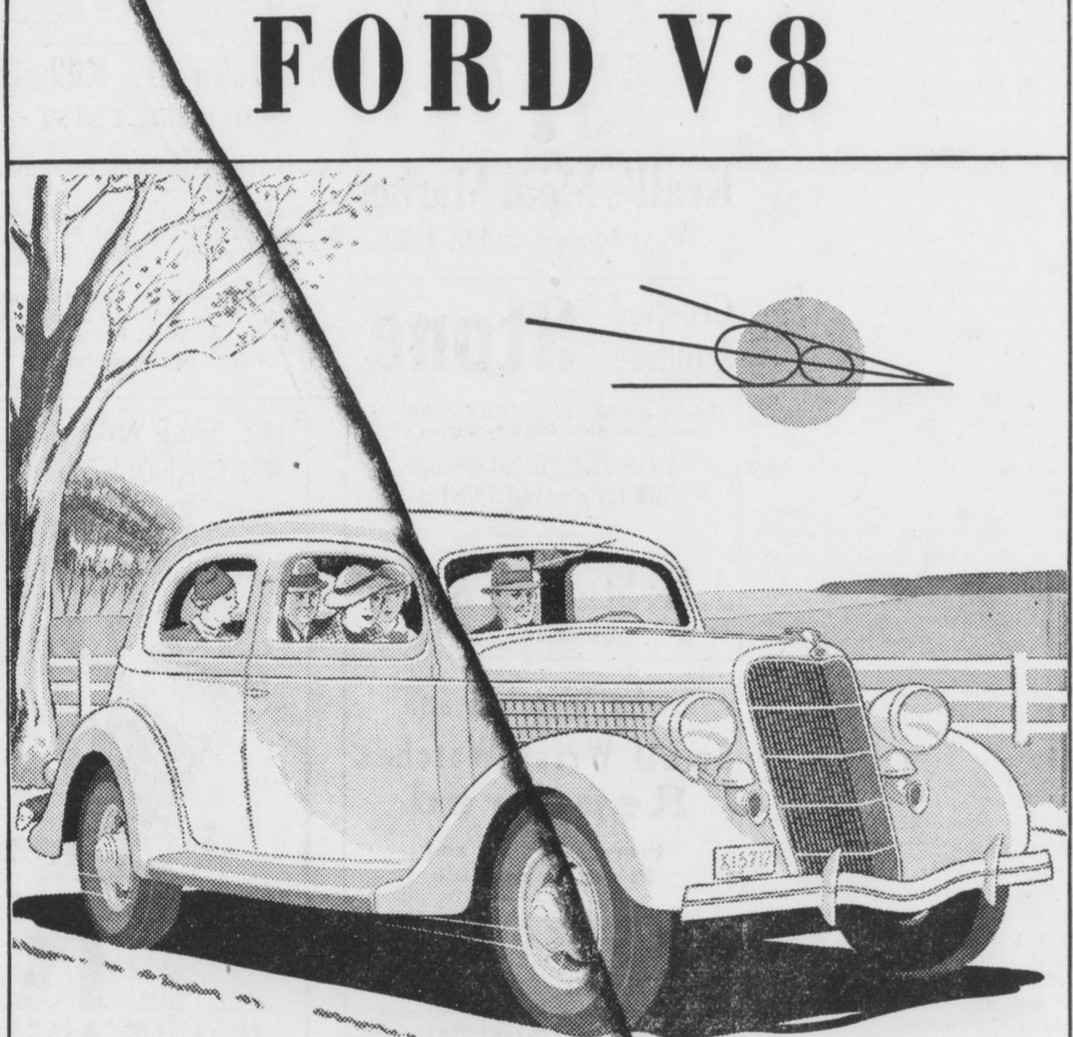

He has too much at stake to risk losing your trade or your confidence. You can depend on him.

He is not in business for today or tomorrow only—but for next year and ten years from next year. He knows the value of good will.

You get better merchandise at a fairer price than he could ever hope to sell it if he did not have the larger volume of business that comes from legitimate advertising and goods that bear out the promise of the printed word.

Don't miss the advertisements. This very day they call your attention to values that tomorrow you will be sorry you overlooked.

In A Class By Itself

THERE is no way to compare the Ford V-8 with any other car because there is no other car like it.

The Ford enables you to step up into the fine-car class in performance, beauty, comfort and safety. But there is no stepping up in price. That is kept down by Ford low-profit policies and unique manufacturing methods. These are as different as the car itself.

It takes eight cylinders to give the modern performance you need these days. The Ford is powered by a V-8—the finest type of eight-cylinder engine. You have to pay more than $2000 for that in any other car.

Florin Student Arrested In a Blackmail Plot

authorities will bring any charges against the youth.

Confessed, Police Say
Taken into custody shortly after noon Tuesday, Eshleman, state police said, admitted sending a letter threatening Hershey's life and property unless he placed $2,000 in small bills before 7:30 p. m. March 27 at the base of a big tree at the spring on the Shenk farm, owned by Elizabethtown College, southeast of Elizabethtown.

Officers Toye and Harbold said when they searched Eshleman's room at the school Tuesday they found part of a sheet of paper, bearing Eshleman's monogram, which matched the paper on which the extortion note was written.

Eshleman got "cold feet" on the night of the 27th, police said, and failed to keep the rendezvous. If he had, officers said, he probably would have been taken into custody then, as both Toye and Harbold were in hiding near the tree that evening.

Eshleman's fear of being captured prevented him from going near the tree when he drove past the spot several nights after the 27th, the police said he told them during the trip to Columbia.

Note Was Printed
Suspicion was directed towards Eshleman by several factors, the state policemen said. The letter threatening Hershey was printed by hand, a subject which police say Eshleman had studied during two and a half years he was a student at college.

The envelope containing the threatening letter was postmarked Harrisburg, March 25, and Eshleman had the opportunity to mail a letter from that city on that date, police said. They also stated that the writer had addressed Hershey during the letter by his first name, Isaac, which was known only to people close to the dealer. The officers said Hershey was a friend of the Eshleman youth and they believed he had aided him financially.

The state police said Eshleman had been a student for the last eight weeks at the Bible school.

A Few Facts About Labor

By B. C. FORBES

We are probably going to hear a lot about labor unions, about wages, about work-hours in coming months. A few A-B-C facts should be, but are not, understood by all.

Who profits when labor leaders "pull" a strike and force a concern out of business? The answer was supplied recently when an old-established manufacturing plant suffered such an experience: The directors and shareholders decided, after outside agitators had succeeded in inciting a prolonged strike, to wind up the business. Consternation reigned when it suddenly dawned on the whole community that the permanent closing of its principal local filler of pay envelopes meant that no more pay envelopes would be filled.

So, the owners were implored to reconsider their decision. It was impossible upon them that ruin would befall many families; that, in addition to the employees thrown idle, local grocers, butchers, bakers, dentists—everybody—would suffer.

Many of those who had obeyed the bidding of the union labor representatives who instigated the walkout joined other citizens in pleading with the management to resume operations. But although various concessions were offered, it was too late; the owners and management decided that the attitude of organized labor was such that there was no sufficient guarantee of future safety, stability, profit.

"You never miss the water till the well runs dry."
Even were every wage-earner in America to join a union and to place himself under the complete dictation of a leader or leaders, wages could not be maintained beyond a certain point.

More money than earned couldn't be paid out for any length of time. Only the amount of wages earned could be distributed.

Any and all business concerns attempting to go beyond that, no matter how dictatorial the demands of labor leaders, would simply go bankrupt and be compelled to throw every worker and executive idle.

Relatively few organizations possess enough cash to continue meeting their payrolls even for six months were no income received—not even Henry Ford could long continue to operate under such circumstances.

You and I have learned from personal experience that we cannot go on paying out more than we take in. Employers are in exactly the same position.

You cannot pour milk out of an empty bottle, nor can you extract a quart from a pint measure.

Before cash can be put into wage envelopes, it must first be drawn in by the wage-payer.

Industry's income is governed mainly by its workers' output.

These elementary truths should be grasped by the most illiterate immigrant, to say nothing of educated American workmen.

Yet agitation is going on at this moment to induce President Roosevelt and Congress to limit the work-week all over the land to 30 hours, without any reduction in the hourly or daily or weekly wage rate.

While some enterprises doubtless could adjust themselves to such a law, the indisputable fact is that the country would be strewn with business wreckage and with appalling unemployment.

A 30-hour week, even a still shorter week, doubtless will come in time, as science and invention bring about more labor-saving machinery and methods and as the application of electric power is multiplied.

But neither America nor any other Nation is yet ready for such a decree.

A rigid 30-hour work week in factory shop, mine and on farm would limit the amount of life's necessities and comforts and luxuries produced; therefore, the amount available for use by consumers would be limited.

And, despite the brain trusters' notions about the value of plowing under foodstuffs, destroying growing cotton, reducing the birth rate of food animals, genuine and lasting prosperity and abundance never come, never can come, never will come from scarcity.

In the final analysis, a Nation cannot have prosperous workers unless it has prosperous business.
