PLANS AIRCRAFT TO CARRY 170 PERSONS

Inventor Claims Many Advantages for Ship.

Berlin .- The disaster to the United States navy's airship Macon has revived speculation here as to the ultimate worth of lighter-than-air craft and has thrown into sharp relief the plans of a German inventor for a 170passenger heavier-than-air flying boat designed to cross the Atlantic from Hamburg to New York in 16 to 18

The designer is Engineer E. Rump ler, builder of the famous Rumpler Taube fighting planes of World war fame and of a dozen other types of Air Resistance Is Feature.

The chief advantage claimed for the Rumpler transocean plane is its lack of air resistance. Viewed from the front, it is merely one enormous wing nounted on two pontoons, which taper back to the tail-steering fin.

Equal load distribution is the second prime feature of the plane. Enginesthere are ten, each of 1,000 horse power-passengers and express are all inside the wing, which is high enough to accommodate a man standing, and which has a spread of 289 feet. The wing is 41 feet from the front to rear.

Doctor Rumpler says he has achieved decentralization. Instead of a cabin in the middle, with other weights such as motors, fuel, pay loads, as in the average plane, which puts too much strain on the wings, he has built a wing strong enough to carry the entire load equally distributed.

Interior Like Pullman Corridor. The interior of the wing looks like a pullman corridor. It is divided from end to end. On the port side are passenger accommodations much like those of a train, with portholes facing the direction of flight. Behind are the ten engines, each with its own attendant and operated independently, with its own four-blade propeller. The plane would cost $1,000,000. The second and third would cost approximately $800,000. Such a plane could reach Honolulu from San Francisco in 12 hours with a useful load of 70 tons, and could conceivably push on from there to Manila in 22 hours. It also would be invaluable to British interests as a link with India and the colonies, a fact which recently has attracted a British syndicate to inquire about the patents.

Students Test Capacity of Soil for Moisture

Lincoln, Neb .- Confronted with the problem of studying the effects of rainfall during the driest period in Nebraska history, Dr. J. E. Weaver's graduate students in botany at the University of Nebraska have turned rainmakers to continue their experiments.

For 18 months they have been engaged in a study to find the absorption capacity of unbroken sod, of wheat stubble fields and of fallow lands. During the greater part of this year and half there was no natural rainfall and an artificial application of water at the rate of an inch every half hour as used in the experiments. Doctor Weaver's students went to arms near Lincoln for their experinents. When it failed to rain they nauled truckloads of water to the These they sprinkled over the est area. Areas three feet wide and 33.3 feet long were inclosed by long poards place on edge in the soil. These kept the water from getting out of the periment lot. Results of the tests showed that native prairie sod held the rain actually en times as well as stubble field and fallow land. From the prairie the water which ran off was nearly clear, while from the fields it was muddy because of soil erosion.

High School Freshmen

to Have New Handbook Philadelphia .- To avoid embarrassing mestions a handbook will be given to freshmen at Lower Merion high school next fall that will guide them in the ways of school activities. G. H. Gilbert, principal of the institution, announced the issuance of the booklet. It will contain explanations of courses, clubs, athletics, plans of the school and other information.

Freshmen always have had the trouble of getting early experience by asking many questions. School officials said this method took so much time and trouble that it eventually became embarrassing. So, they believe, the new booklet will be a great help to the new students.

Former Largest Barn in

World Being Torn Down Kearney, Neb .- What once was the argest barn in the world, a 300-foot-long building constructed to convince midland ranchers of the value of alfalfa as live stock feed, is being razed.

The old barn has been ordered torn down by its present owner, William Wright, because he is convinced it is unsafe. It was built by H. D. Watson, pioneer advocate of alfalfa.

Dimensions of the structure were 300 feet long, 100 feet wide and 56 feet high. It was located on the old 1733 ranch."
