THE EXPENSE OF SPEED

One of the interesting discoveries with regard to automobile motors is that when you step on the gasoline your gasoline expenditure mounts with your speed. Thirteen makes of automobiles were tested to find if it applied to them all. The result was uniform, disclosing that oil as well as gasoline consumption mounts.

The following is the tabulation of tests announced by the American Automobile association:

- 30 miles an hour, 18 miles per gallon. 60 miles an hour, 12.6 miles per gallon. 80 miles an hour, 8.6 miles per gallon. Oil consumption is seven times as great at 55 miles as at 30 miles.

This is, we suppose, no concern of a person who starts out on a trip at eighty miles or more per hour. Doubtless he never worries about the bill—his widow can take care of it out of the insurance money.

HALLOWEEN

More honored nowadays in the breach than the observance the custom of malicious mischief-making on Halloween, the traditional night when witches, devils, and spirits of darkness are abroad and looking for trouble. So are the police authorities in most communities, and they recognize no supernatural excuses for destruction of property on Halloween.

Other traditions attached to which do not quarrel with has other names than Halloween and Snapapple Night. Its celebration are involved go far back in human history, mythology and Druidic mystic rituals. Some ancient oblige once well approved. "In early sixteenth century, "good boys" bake braid and dele it for their rhotie reason, perhaps, at night in some places.

But the mischief-making the most part, is an American night's traditions. For many years it is no longer in fashion to substitute rowdiness for the kindly old customs of Halloween, and there is no need to make allowances for those who do so.

COUNTY FIREMEN

Rather tardily a movement begins to prevent the heavy losses from fire in the rural districts. During the last year 3,500 persons perished and property losses amounting to $255,000,000 occurred because of the burning of farm homes and other buildings.

Until quite recently the hastily-formed bucket brigade afforded the only fire protection in the districts outside of municipalities. Because the buildings were isolated, their total loss usually was expected when fire broke out.

But with the improvement of highways and the general use of telephones, and modern fire fighting equipments, it has been found practicable to organize rural volunteer fire departments. Under the new conditions, such facilities are able to afford protection for all buildings within a radius of 10 or 12 miles of the department headquarters.

Also much has been gained for safety by teaching youths of the 4-H clubs to make periodic inspections of farm buildings to remove fire hazards. Some of the money appropriated for the benefit of agriculture might well be spent in perfecting means of lessening fire risks, providing fire-fighting equipment and helping in the organization of local fire departments.

In the loss of a farm home many values are involved not easy to set down in an appraisal.

Ford Truck Demonstrators Offered

FORD dealers throughout the country are being these specially painted Ford V-8 157-inch stake-body trucks as demonstrators. They are finished in vermilion and cream. The demonstrators are loaned to business and industrial concerns for road tests with their own loads and drivers, over their own selected routes, for at least 24 hours. By the end of the year this fleet is expected to be the largest truck fleet in the world printed in one color scheme.

Mixed Dates

By CLARENCE CARPENTER © McClure Newspaper Syndicate, WNU Service.

THE shrill ring of a bell interrupted my study. Glad of an excuse I tossed the hefty book to one side and reached for my phone. Maybe it was Ellen May; she had promised to call sometime, but of course I couldn't expect too much of her. Ellen May was a very popular coed.

It was Bertie Gregg's smooth voice: "Listen, Ned—I'm in a jam. That's sweet," I retorted, surprised at my own wit. "But don't expect me to mix in any of your affairs. Why can't you be a little more discreet anyhow?" Bertie was a terror with the coeds.

"Why, Ned," Bertie reproached me. "Have you forgotten who fixed you up with tickets for the big game? Don't you remember who rushed you into the frat? And besides," he added, impressively, "who, may I ask, introduced you to Ellen May?"

"That did it. Tell me the worst," I groaned. "Nothing to it, Ned. A friend of my sister, a school teacher, arrives on the five-forty today. She's thinking of taking a postgrad here and wants to look the place over. Sis wrote me to show her around, and you can bet it's goodly allowance if I don't. But I got a date tonight."

"Now wait a minute, Bertie," I protested. "I don't want Ellen May to see me with a strange girl." "No danger of meeting Ellen May in the library," came Bertie's snappy retort. "Besides, take a tip from me. Don't take Ellen May too seriously. Ned. She isn't your type. But be sure and meet this Miss Susan Malver. Better use my name. She never saw me before and she goes home tomorrow anyway."

Eight o'clock found me setting at a table near the dance floor of the College Town hotel. At my side was a dream of a girl with soft red lips and bright blue eyes. "I thought you would like to see something besides class buildings, Sue," I told her.

"Oh, Bertie," she interrupted me in a sweet, innocent voice. "Who are the couple doing that rather-rather bold dance?" "Bet it's Bertie Gregg," I thought grimly, turning to look. It was Bertie, giving an especially wild execution of the collegiate dip. Snuggled in his arms was Ellen May.

Ellen May was Bertie's date! No wonder that snake-in-the-grass had advised me not to take Ellen May too seriously. Looking down into the questioning eyes of the girl at my side I suddenly realized that Ellen May's fecklessness had not affected me half so much as it might have. "Oh, they're just a couple of students," I answered evasively.

Then Bertie saw us. I knew by the gleam in his eyes that Sue's good looks had not escaped him. I wasn't a bit surprised to see him drop Ellen May at the captain's table and come sauntering over to us.

Smiling broadly, Bertie sat down without an invitation. "I'm Ned Kennedy," he said, introducing himself to Sue. "I heard my friend Bertie here had company but I never dreamed it would be so charming. I thought you were the more serious type, like—like Bertie, here."

When Sue and the real Bertie came back, Bertie sat right down again with apparently no intention of leaving the lovely Sue. "It's funny," she confided, "but I have a feeling you boys are playing a game." Bertie started, and I looked up hopefully. I hated the mess this mixup had made. I didn't want to be Bertie Gregg a minute longer.

"You know," Bertie," Sue went on, turning her violet eyes on me and thus sending my thoughts flying again, "your sister told me you were a little wild; instead I find you a nice quiet boy, right at home in the library of study."

"Ned, here, was supposed to be the serious, hard working lad, interested in his career," Sue smiled at Bertie. "Then I find him playing the bold part. Now why don't you boys confess that it's all a game to make me think Bertie has reformed? Honor bright, I won't say a word to Bertie's sister."

I gropped awkwardly for words, but Bertie was always ready for any emergency. "You clever girl," he admired. "How did you guess it? I'm glad though that you found me out. I'm glad you found I'm the type to appeal to a girl like you. I think we are going to like each other very, very much."

The dedication of this beautiful church, is the combination of years of endeavor and loyalty and the pastor and members of the congregation feel the keenest sense of gratitude as they view with pride the beautiful new edifice. Earliest recollections picture a group of about thirteen persons meeting regularly for Bible Study in the shoemaker shop of Fritz Greenawalt of Chestnut Hill, grand father of the present secretary of the congregation, C. E. Greenawalt of Mountville. From the small beginning the congregation grew to its present strength. From the shoemaker shop, with increased members, quarters for worship were taken in a barn on the spot very close to the residence of Samuel Bard, northeast of Ironville.

In 1859 a Pastor Strine of Lancaster took charge of the services which were then held in the old shoemaker shop northeast of the Ironville Bridge. The building was later remodeled and became the residence of Mr. Philip Bard. In this schoolroom the congregation continued until the first church was erected in 1861. The congregation has been self supporting from the very beginning. Since Chestnut Hill was a German settlement it is needless to say that all services were conducted in the German language. In 1861 a "Deutsche Evangelisch Lu-

INFANT PRODIGY

Dr. Bryng Bryngelson, director of the University of Minnesota speech clinic, described twenty-month-old Jackie Grub of Robbinsdale, Minn., shown above, as a "genius." Jackie who is lefthanded, has a vocabulary of 1,100 words. He has an intelligence rating of 200 on the Binet-Simon scale on which 100 is supposed to indicate genius. Jackie has passed the test for three-year-olds and two of the tests for four-year-olds.

A golf professional, hired by a big department store to give golf lessons, was approached by two women.

"Do you wish to learn to play golf, madam?" he asked one. "Oh, no," she said, "it's my friend who wants to learn. I learned yesterday."—San Antonio Chaser.
