EDITORIAL

Britain's current moves for peace are called an "eleventh hour plea," but according to developments in Ethiopia it's 1:30 in the morning.

DANGEROUS AGE

There is a sort of adding-insult-to-injury tone about a report submitted to the American College of Surgeons at San Francisco the other day stating that from forty to sixty is a dangerous age for receiving bumps on the head. People in that age classification, one would think, have enough on their minds without the worry, gratuitously presented, that they are not properly equipped to receive a bat on the cranium.

Obviously that twenty-year span is a dangerous age. From it one looks backward on youth and forward upon old age. It is the period in which, insurance statisticians disclose, they are disposed to step out from behind motor cars into traffic without looking to right or left.

And now the report to the surgeons of America say it is a dangerous age for bumps on the head, that people from forty to sixty years old have water on the brain and that falling out of an apple tree or a hayloft, a minor matter at 10 or 12, is likely to put the layer of hydrodynamics in operation and create hydrostatic pressure, which is more dangerous than hemorrhage.

LOOKING ON TO CHRISTMAS

The Christmas buying season is on us. The next few weeks see the peak of retail trade. A great new buying power is about to be turned into the commercial stream. It should lift business to a new level.

Much depends on what the people decide to do with their money. Will they feel some sentiment of loyalty to their home town? Will they say that so far as they can, they would like to spend that money at home?

If they take that attitude a powerful boost will be given to Mount Joy, the effect of which will be felt for months. The money thus spent will put our home town business on a firmer foundation, it will permit old debts to be cleaned up, new stocks to be put in, more people to be employed in our local stores, more done to make our community a business and trading center.

Our people should also think whether the way they spend this money is going to be unfair to our business people. If those who have money to spend wait until the last week or two before the holiday, we shall as usual see a grand rush at the stores and post office, which will impose a severe burden on all these workers, and is an expensive and uneconomic way of doing business. Let us resolve to buy early, and buy at home, and if we do that the holiday season will be a happy one for us.

ON BEING THANKFUL

A study of the conditions of life back in 1621 when the Pilgrim Fathers held their first observance of Thanksgiving, suggests but meager reasons for the ardent spirit of gratitude that glowed in the hearts of the first settlers. Their huts were built upon rocky land and before them was the merciless sea, beating upon a stern coast. At their backs was the wilderness, where savages and beasts lurked, an ever-present menace to life.

But the harvest that year had been good. There was an assurance of sufficient food for the long, hard winter, and this certainty of the means of sustaining life was considered by these simple, hardy people, whose material needs were so few, as sufficient cause for public thanksgiving.

What a contrast the present day offers! We have suffered reverses, it is true, but still we enjoy relative comfort and freedom from the specter of starvation.

Our problems during late years have been serious and disheartening. Many have yielded to the influences of despair and desperation but, for the most part, the fires of faith have been kept burning and, through hard struggle and faltering steps, we have returned to the upward path of progress.

The future, while not glowing is nevertheless brighter. The worst is behind us and somewhere, off on the horizon, is an America that conforms more closely to our hopes and ambitions.

The Welfare Drive Here Next Week

$271,081.94 which Welfare is asking for 1936 is forthcoming agencies will have to close.

That's the story of Welfare in a nutshell! It needs $271,081.94 to operate its agencies in 1936—not a dollar less!

That's the rock-bottom figure. It was probably all very well, in depression years, to excuse shortages in Welfare's budget. But that day is past. Welfare is at the crossroads. Either it gets what it needs or agencies close. And there isn't a single Welfare agency Lancaster city and county can do without.

The challenge is to the community.

Welfare Parade

An automobile Welfare Parade will be held Monday evening, Nov. 25, starting promptly at 7 o'clock from the Grade School Building.

A representative group of the different organizations are expected to participate.

Anyone wishing to enter their cars should be at the Grade School Building, promptly at 7.

County Milk Distributor Assails Law

scribed as "unfair, unjust, unreasonable, confiscatory and discriminatory, in that other dealers were not required to comply with its orders."

The board's order was made November 15, 1934, after investigation revealed that Rohrer had underpaid milk producers $3788 during April, May, June and July.

He was ordered to pay the sum to the producers or go out of business. He refused to do either, but appealed to the Lancaster County Court, which ruled against him. He then took the present appeal to the Superior Court.

The board's order commanded Rohrer to "cease and desist purchasing or handling milk in Pennsylvania or sale, shipment, storage processing or manufacturing with-in and without Pennsylvania, or from operating in any other way in Pennsylvania as a milk dealer."

White declared the act creating the board is an arbitrary infringement upon individual rights and in violation of the Constitution.

He declared the act is not a police regulation, pointing out there is nothing in the statute regarding sanitary conditions in the production, handling and distribution of milk to protect the public health all of which matters are provided for by other laws.

The milk Control Board was represented by Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti, Deputy Attorney General W. F. Daniels and Special Deputy Harry Polikoff.

Flag Salute Is Explained To Directors

whether to require the salute as part of patriotic exercises.

"I have no ruling from the Department of Public Instruction," he said. But Attorney General Margiotti has ruled that if a teacher refuses, she shall be unceremoniously bounced out. If children refuse to salute the flag, they shall be suspended, and if they persist in their refusal, they shall be expelled."

Mr. Mylin said his fear that a controversy might arise in Lancaster county prompted him to make these clarifications. It was received without comment from the 227 directors in the Millersville State Teachers' College chapel.
