

New Chevrolet Truck on Economy-Safety Run

Carrying a 10,000-lb. cement block from Los Angeles to New York, a 1 1/2-ton Chevrolet truck—one of the new 1936 models just introduced—demonstrated that safe driving means economy. Speed limits were observed in every community, with 35 m.p.h. the maximum on the open road. The 3511.4 miles were completed on two quarts of oil and 308.6 gallons of gasoline, at a cost of 01.6 cents per mile, or one-third of a cent per ten mile. The entire run was completed without any mechanical failure, repairs, or even a scratched fender. The illustrations show the test truck and features of the new 1936 models. Coupe type cabs with solid steel roof, full-floating rear axle, and full-length water jackets, are some of the improvements. In the lower right, Harry Hartz, who drove the cross-continent test, is seen beside the 10,000-lb. block. The test was officially observed by the American Automobile Association.

Several things may be done to eliminate the danger. First, the carburetor should be adjusted to produce a mixture of gas and air that will burn as completely as possible—if all the fuel is burned no carbon monoxide can be produced. Second, all parts of the exhaust line from the manifold connection to the discharge end of the exhaust pipe should be kept tight and similar precautions should be taken in connection with the exhaust-type car heaters. The exhaust pipe should extend beyond the end of the car body. In the third place, floor boards should be made to fit tightly and all openings should be closed in the dash.
 When operating on the highway a driver should avoid following another vehicle (particularly a large truck or bus) too closely and he should always keep at least one window partially open to admit fresh air.
 If he feels drowsy at any time, he should stop, open his car windows, and get out and walk for a short time.

ARSON A DEPRESSION RACKET

The arson racket, formerly practiced almost entirely by shady commercial firms, is now being widely used by some desperate home owners as a means of saving something from their heavily mortgaged property. Most of the larger commercial fires used to be set in a workmanlike manner that made detection and prosecution difficult; yet the insurance companies and fire marshals believe they solved the biggest majority of such cases, no matter how tough.
 With the amateurish jobs being pulled by small home-owners, the case is usually spotted as arson by the first fireman on the scene, and in scarcely an instance does the owner collect the insurance. But incendiarism continues to grow. The annual arson bill is now over $165,000,000 in direct property damage, while the increased insurance premiums cost property owners another sum almost as large.

Chains On Autos Not Mandatory

 It does make their use permissible when desired for safety because of snow, ice, or conditions tending to cause a vehicle to slide or skid. When chains are used, however, the code provides that they must consist of not less than five cross chains.
 In recent years "emergency units" or so-called "mud-hooks" have become popular. These are single or paired cross chains separately attached by adjustable straps and originally intended for temporary installation if a car became mired.
 If only one or two such units are applied to a tire the wheel spins rapidly until the cross chain strikes the road surface with a chopping effect very injurious to the highway. For the greatest anti-skid effectiveness and to avoid paying a fine, Kelly advised motorists to comply with the law by applying a sufficient number of cross chains when such devices are used.

 It is always wise to buy an extra yard of stair carpet. Fold the surplus length at either end when laying and when it begins to wear push up on stairs. By employing this method stair carpet will wear longer.

Kelly Tells How to Avoid The Auto Gas

SECRETARY OF REVENUE EXPLAINS DANGERS AND SUGGESTS PRECAUTIONS AGAINST CARBON MONOXIDE GAS

Carbon monoxide can knock you out without warning like a black-jack blow on the head, Secretary of Revenue John B. Kelly warns motorists. He pointed out that the odorless and tasteless gas will often strike motorists while they are driving their cars along the open road.
Cars Contain Gas
 Recent tests made to ascertain the extent of the hazard due to carbon monoxide in the interior of motor vehicles while in operation disclosed that over sixty per cent of all kinds of cars contain measurable concentrations of carbon monoxide and that seven per cent of them contain quantities that may cause collapse of the driver and infinitely increase the probability of fatal accidents, if the driver is exposed to the dangerous atmosphere of four or more hours.
MAY EXPLAIN ACCIDENTS
 It is possible that the driver killed when his vehicle runs off the highway and crashes against a tree or overturns in a ditch has been overcome by the deadly gas and that the vehicle has continued on with no guiding hand at the wheel. Some of the head-on collisions that occur in broad daylight and on wide straight roads may be explained in the same way. Carbon monoxide is especially dangerous because it strikes without warning.
 Several things may be done to eliminate the danger. First, the carburetor should be adjusted to produce a mixture of gas and air that will burn as completely as possible—if all the fuel is burned no carbon monoxide can be produced. Second, all parts of the exhaust line from the manifold connection to the discharge end of the exhaust pipe should be kept tight and similar precautions should be taken in connection with the exhaust-type car heaters. The exhaust pipe should extend beyond the end of the car body. In the third place, floor boards should be made to fit tightly and all openings should be closed in the dash.
