

Crowds Pour Into Exposition Grounds

Every day is a busy day at the Great Lakes Exposition in Cleveland and this picture shows the crowds pouring across the Court of Presidents into the compact grounds of the Exposition. The grounds cover 150 acres lying along the cool shores of Lake Erie. Overhead are two of the blimps which take passengers for trips over the grounds and the city.

Ford's Thirty-Three Years of Service

On the 33rd anniversary of the birth of the Ford Motor Company, June 16, 1903, found that organization serving the transportation needs of the public in every part of the civilized world, and with representatives on every continent. During its thirty-three years of existence the company has outgrown its quarters almost as rapidly as new ones could be provided, from the first MacAvoy Plant to that at Piquette and Beaubien Avenues, in Detroit; thence to the A Building Highland Park largest factory in the state in 1909; thence to the vastly enlarged Highland Park Plant and the out-crowding of that; the use of assembly plants everywhere; the development of the 1,096 acre Rouge Plant; and finally the commencement of village industries in rural communities.

This record of industrial expansion resulted from the purposeful adherence to Mr. Henry Ford's idea of a car for the multitude—one that would be economical to own and efficient in performance. "I will build a motor car for the multitude. It shall be large enough for the family, but small enough for the unskilled individual to operate and care for easily—and it shall be light in weight that it may be economical in maintenance. It will be built of honest materials—by the best workmen that money can hire—after the simplest designs that modern engineering can devise.

THE WEEK'S Tall Story

Mrs. Freda Price of Laidig, Pa., thinks her native state is a wonderful place and cites one of the marvels of nature which proves her point. Many years ago in the days of the muzzle-loading rifle, she relates, "Honest John," a man well known for his veracity, was hunting on a mild Indian Summer day. He hunted longer than usual and having used all his ammunition sat down to rest. While sitting there he ate some peaches, putting the stones back in his pockets instead of throwing them away. Soon afterward he heard a rustling noise and looked up to see a buck of magnificent size slowly approaching. Since he had no more shot Honest John quickly jammed a peach stone down the muzzle of his gun and fired, hitting the buck in the head. For a moment the animal faltered as if stunned, but suddenly with a quick toss of the head he was off again in the brush. A year passed before Honest John returned to that exact locality and rambling over the mountain one day he was astonished to see a fair-sized tree moving down the slope. He soon caught up with it and found the tree was growing from the forehead of the buck he had attempted to kill the year before. Several years after that Honest John was standing in his cabin "oh looking toward the mountain." His attention was at once attracted to an immense tree which seemed to be moving about. Without waiting to do more than pick up his ax and a coil of rope he started off toward the mountain. Seen he came to the moving tree. Of course it was the same deer. He promptly lassoed it, picked all the peaches, and chopped down the tree. From the lumber obtained from this tree he built a six-room house and used the peach stones to build the chimney. It is the only peach lumber house in Pennsylvania.

ONE THING WE MUST HAVE

We may live without poetry, music or art; We may live without conscience and live without heart; We may live without friends, we may live without books— But civilized man cannot live without cooks. There is no better way to boost your business than by local newspaper advertising.

course, were lamps and horn. Figures compiled on the infant company's first year of business revealed that a total of 1,708 of the little runabouts were made and sold. Though that first Ford sold for $800, the amount of business done by the Company during its first year actually passed the million dollar mark. (To be continued next week)
