

OWL LAFFS

BY A WISE OWL

"Every year is leap year for pedestrians," remarked a Florin man after one of his daily walks to work at the Shoe Factory.

A man wandered into a tennis tournament on our local courts, and sat down on the bench. "Whose game?" he asked. A shy young thing sitting next to him looked up hopefully and answered: "I am." "Tsh! Tsh! Seeh goings on."

At breakfast this morning an East Main Street wife remarked to her husband: "I want to do some shopping today, dear, at Lancaster, if the weather is favorable. What does the paper say?" Hubby, knowing it would cost him plenty, looked at the paper and read: "Rain, hail, thunder and lightning." "....It's lucky for him that w.hey didn't look at the weather report."

A sweet young couple met at the church to be married. She, dressed all in white bridal attire, looked at him disappointedly and said: "Why John, what do you mean by coming to our wedding in a business suit?" He took her by the arm and explained: "Well, I mean business."

Thirty days hath Sept., April, June and my uncle for speeding.

"I used to sell underthings to Nudist Colonies," remarked Red Metzler. Puzzled, a pal asked: "What kind of underthings?" Red laughed and said: "Cushions."

Recently, at Elizabethtown, just as the big parade was getting underway, a little fellow called to his sister: "Here comes the parade. Where's mother?" His sister answered: "She's upstairs waving her hair." Amazed th boy said: "Goodness, can't we afford a flag?"

Lots of people keep the wolf from the door by being foxy.

A hapless hubby from hereabouts absent mindingly remarked: "One seems to be my unlucky number." His wife asked: "How's that, dear?" He explained: "You and I became one." ".....Now he's in a ward, she's a good shot."

All a girl needs to lead a man on, is a good strong line.

"Gosh, you're lazy," said a fellow worker to Busty Mater, who would you have done if you had been brought up among people who lived by the sweat of their brows?" Busty smiled and readily answered: "I would have sold them pocket handkerchiefs."

It's no use talking turkey to a man who is chicken-hearted.

"I can speak Spanish, German, French and Italian, but there's one tongue I can't master," complained an interpreter. "What's that?" asked a sympathetic friend. "My wife's," boomed the man of many languages. He's not alone in that difficulty. We've several in the very same trouble.

We want to know—if there was such a thing as a drinking bout, would they broadcast a round-by-round description?

Several local ladies spent some time at the seashore. After returning home they were discussing their vacation with some friends when the one remarked: "So there was no bathtub at that seaside hotel?" One of the ladies explained: "No, it was a case of sink or swim, so I chose the sink."

Which reminds me—the only time a girl won't go to great lengths to please a man, is when she buys a swimming suit.

Another fellow who's in a shady business, is a tree surgeon. A WISE OWL

The Gretna Players

George R. Taylor is making one of the greatest hits in all his theatrical career in this week's production, "The Music Master" in which he plays the title role. This splendid David Belasco opus is being presented every night, excepting Sunday, at the Gretna Theatre, Mt. Gretna, by A. E. Scott's Gretna Players. Playing the role of the forlorn girl, who would love to learn music, but who cannot afford it—is Miss Margaret Mansfield, who should have orchids sent to her for her outstanding portrayal of this role.

The entire story of the play centers about "The Music Master" who comes to this country for the two-fold purpose of earning, and to find his missing daughter. The little girl had disappeared years before that with his runaway wife, and in an effort to trace them he had learned that they came to America, the country of his faith and his hope. Don't get the idea from all this, however, that the play is all sweetly sad or sadly sentimental—from it. It has enough humor to keep you chuckling no end. In fact, it has all the attributes which go to make up a perfect play, which is the reason for its immortality.

Next week, the Players will dwell in the realm of the pure comic when they will present that great Broadway comedy hit, "Whistling in the Dark."

LANDISVILLE'S BIG CARNIVAL SATURDAY NIGHT, JULY 25

By popular demand the Mason Amusement Co. has booked that stellar attraction Slim and Hank to play a return engagement on the Speedway grounds, at Landisville on Saturday evening, July 25.

These two well known entertainers appear with the famous Royal Ramblers. This is a group of unsurpassed entertainers comprising comedians, musicians and singers making their first appearance in this section. Slim and Hank promise to do a very special program.

In addition to the above there will be the usual carnival attractions. Admission, 15 cents. Parking and children free.

Outraged Customer

Stamp Clerk—Madam, this letter is overweight. You'll have to put on another stamp.

Madam—Well, of all the mean people! Here I've mailed hundreds of letters that were overweight—and now you are going to charge me because I'm sending one that's just a teeny bit over the limit. And right at our own postoffice too.

GRASS FOR DINNER

Dried grass dishes are among the latest food delicacies developed by chemist-dieticians who claim that young cereal grasses such as oats, rye and barley are several hundred times more nutritious than spinach, carrots, lettuce, etc. However, they must be cut at exactly the right time as the variation of a week will reduce the vitamin, mineral and fat content by 50 per cent.

Sunday Editor—What did you find out about that murder?

Reporter—Nothing.

Editor—No facts at all?

Reporter—Not a solitary fact.

Editor—No rumors?

Reporter—Nothing in the shape of a rumor.

Editor—That's too bad. We'll have to keep the article down to two columns.

Podunk—What did Eli Cornpone see when he took that trip to Washington recently?

Pee-wee—Nothing. He spent all his time hunting for the silver dollar that George Washington threw across the river. And then he didn't find it.

Customer—How's this? You have charged me twice as much as usual for shaving me.

Barber—It's according to the new code. My razor was dull and it took me twice as long as usual to shave you.

SOYBEAN FOODS NEXT

Housewives have been hard pressed to find substitutes or something just as those foods with sky-rocketing prices. Members of experimental cookery classes of Iowa state college have centered their attention on this problem too. They say the soybean makes an appetizing and nutritious dish when served with tomato sauce. Tests of soybean bologna, cheese and cereals were less successful. Soybean flour used for baking produced a heavy product and the flavor of soybean "coffee" proved a bit strange. Nevertheless, the common but little eaten soybean is likely to turn out to be an important food factor in the near future.

Henry Peck—Just my luck! Friend—What's the matter now? Peck—I promised my wife I'd be home by 10 o'clock last night. Friend—Couldn't you make it? Peck—Yes, I did even better, I got in just at 9:45 but she was sound asleep and I failed to get any credit. I might as well have stayed up with you boys.

Doctor—Your husband is a very sick man and he needs a special nurse.

Mrs. Gnaggs—Well, if he has to have a nurse I wish you would send a homely one.

Doctor—I would do it if I could—but all the homely ones have starved to death during the depression.

Husband—How much did you pay for them eggs?

Wife—I had to pay 30 cents a dozen.

Husband—Well, we're too poor to eat eggs when they're as high as that. Put 'em down in the cellar 'an keep 'em till eggs gets cheaper.

She (gushingly)—Will you love me when I am old?

He—Love you? I shall idolize you. I shall worship the ground under your little feet. I shall-um-er-You are not going to look like your mother are you?

Marie—Are they in love?

Mazie—They must be. She listens to him describe a ball game and he listens to her telling how her cousin's new dress was made.
