Mrs. Benjamin Hawthorne and daughter, Martha, who reside on East Main Street, had a most thrilling and exciting experience on Sunday when they boarded an airplane at the Lancaster Municipal Airport and flew to Mount Joy where they viewed the town from an elevation of 2,000 feet. Mrs. Hawthorne says it was quite a thrill and she wasn't frightened the least bit. Brown's Cotton Mill was the most outstanding building in her birds-eye-view of town and that was a miniature in comparison to its size.

Mrs. Hawthorne's son, John, has been employed at the airport since Memorial Day and is learning to be an aviator in his leisure time. He has built a number of model planes, one of which is now in the possession of Jesse Jones, veteran pilot, who has it displayed in his office at the airport.

KEEP PULLETS COOL

Range Shelters provide a cool place for pullets in hot weather. A shelter for 100 to 125 pullets may be built at low cost and it can be put up in a few hours. Birds need all the fresh air they can get, and it is difficult to get enough circulation through most brooder houses.
