

Washington's Home Is Tribute

In 1757, George Washington inherited the above story-and-a-half house from his half-brother, Lawrence, who had named it Mount Vernon Villa. This was the nucleus from which he was to build today's Mount Vernon.

In 1759, George Washington married the Widow Custis and in her honor the roof was raised a full story, though the same architectural lines were preserved. In 1774 a right wing was added, and a covered walk in 1775.

In 1776 the left wing was added, giving the home a mansion appearance. Even during the Revolution George Washington reaffirmed his faith in the infant nation by continuing his program of expansion at Mount Vernon.

In 1787 came the crowning achievement, a cupola that gave Mount Vernon an added air of distinction. Meanwhile the grounds had also been improved. Note in the top photograph how a perfect symmetry was maintained.

Typical of Mount Vernon's simple yet elegant interior is the famous banquet hall, where hangs the famous portrait, "The Unknown." This is thought to have been made of Washington at the order of Governor Dinwiddie of Virginia, in recognition of his services in the French and Indian war. Dinwiddie disposed of the portrait upon learning his protégé had joined the Revolution. Left: The equestrian statue of Washington standing in the Williamsburg bridge plaza, New York.

It Takes the Cake

By BEULAH V. GILLASPIE
Director, Sealtest Laboratory Kitchen

ASK the men-folks (and many of the women too) what is their favorite type of cake. Coconut comes right at the top in their answers—and chocolate follows closely. So, when you provide this luscious combination of both coconut and chocolate, M-m-m! Served with Vanilla or chocolate ice cream, it's double in deliciousness!

CHOCOLATE COCONUT LAYER CAKE
3/4 cup butter 4 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1 1/2 cups sugar 1/2 teaspoon salt
4 egg yolks 1 cup milk
3 cups cake flour 1 teaspoon vanilla
Cream the butter, add the sugar gradually and cream thoroughly. Add the egg yolks and beat well. Mix and sift the flour, baking powder and salt and add to the first mixture alternately with the milk. Add the vanilla and pour into 3 buttered deep 9-inch layer cake pans. Bake in a moderately hot oven (375° F.) for 20 to 25 minutes or until done. Make frosting as follows:

3 cups sugar 4 egg whites
1 cup water 1 teaspoon vanilla
1 teaspoon light 4 squares corn syrup chocolate
3/4 cup shredded coconut
Cook the sugar, water and corn syrup together over low heat, stirring until the sugar is dissolved. Bring to a boil, cover and cook for about 3 minutes. Continue cooking to 242° F. or until the mixture spins a long thread. Keep covered as much as possible. (On a very damp day the mixture may have to be cooked as high as 248° F. before a long thread forms.) Pour the hot syrup slowly over the stiffly beaten egg whites, beating constantly. Add the vanilla and beat until cool and stiff enough to spread. Add the melted chocolate and spread between the layers and on the top and sides of the cake. Sprinkle with the coconut.

Such Rot!

THE expression on Gill Stanton's face changed from cold anger to hopeless despair. He glanced from the pile of household bills spread before him on the living room table to his wife's sweetly unperturbed countenance.

"Diane, I can't understand it. Why you go on spending, piling up debt after debt when you know how hard we are."
"But, darling, why worry about a few trifling bills when—"
"Why worry! Trifling bills! Good Lord, woman, don't you realize my salary's been cut twice within the past six months? Why, I'm having a job making enough to meet our running expenses!"

"But, precious, you didn't let me finish. I was going to say, why worry when we know we're coming into a lot of money within a very short time."

"Coming into money? And just where is this money coming from?"
"What difference," she asked, "does it make where it's coming from, so long as we know it's coming."
"Say, are you seeing that fakir Tazini again?"

"Tazini is not a fakir! He's an astrologer. Everything he predicts comes true. That's why he has such a big clientele."

Gill leaped to his feet and his face was black with rage. "Diane, if I'd have thought you were going to turn to that, if I can prove to you that I'm right about Tazini—"

"You can't," said Diane. Gill turned away. He picked up his hat and went out without a word. He jumped into his coupe and at length drew up before the residence of Tazini, the astrologer. Sitting cross-legged before a smouldering pot of incense the great Tazini looked up at him with heavy eyes.

"Who is this who intrudes upon the solitude and privacy of the great reader of stars—"

"Nuts!" said Gill. He looked for a chair and, finding none, remained standing. "Tazini, old boy, you've been feeding my wife a lot of tripe about an inheritance we're going to get, and she's run up a flock of bills that I can't pay. Now here's the proposition: I've got fifty bucks in cash and that's all. It's yours if you'll agree to reverse your line and make the little woman think the inheritance is off and she'd better start economizing or we're both destined for poverty row. Either that or I'll queer your little game by enlisting a flock of federal dicks and fetching 'em down here to look the ground over. And I'm not kidding."

Tazini's heavy-lidded eyes gazed into Gill's blue ones, and then he coughed. "O. K.," he said. "Hand over the dough."
The next day when Gill came home from the office he found his wife with a worried frown on her face. "Oh, darling, you were right. I mean, I went to Tazini again and the stars have told him there'll be no legacy. Something has happened that he can't explain—something about the location of Neptune. Moreover, Tazini says that unless we economize we—we're destined for poverty row. Oh, darling, I'm so sorry."

Inwardly Gill chuckled. Outwardly he was grave.

"I'm going to begin economizing," Diane said.

Gill rode to work the following morning feeling as though a tremendous burden had been lifted from his shoulders. Pretty smart of himself, he thought, to take the bull by the horns. He thought of other victims of Tazini. Perhaps he should have brought the federal dicks in anyhow. It would have been kinder to those poor misguided souls who actually believed he could predict things like inheritances. Such rot! Imagine anyone believing they were actually coming into money.

Gill reached his office and found on his desk a long and important looking envelope. He slit the seal and read. The letter stated that a distant and long forgotten uncle had died and willed his entire fortune, amounting to $25,000, to Gill and Diane.
