The Low Down From Hickory Grove

Seems like I am seeing more of these cars with an E. on the license plate. And instead of just a little E. they would have a big sign on the door reading—Politician's car, paid for by the Taxpayers.

And you know, the more you see of these exempt outfits, the more it kinda soaks in what kind of a sucker you are for not getting one for your ownself.

Having a nice 1940 chaise with free gas, and a free license plate—and the car free in the first place—and all you have to do is drive it, stranger, those boys, they got something.

I am not much for getting excited about just another politician, but their exempt, free cars, they kinda get me. They half-way get me agitated. Kinda like on the Fox Farm where the young lady visitors just out of college, she asked the proprietor about how many times you could skin a fox. And the boss gulped and he says, sister, these fores, he says, after you skin 'em about a coupla times, you know, they commence to get just a trifle voxed and agitated.

Yours with the low down
BAINBRIDGE FIRE CALLS OUT NEW ENGINE

The new fire engine of the Bainbridge Fire Company raced to its second fire on Monday, December 4, with its siren screaming, only to turn around almost immediately and race back. It was only a chimney fire at Reuben Ebersole's farm. The engine was put to its first use back in October 31, Hallowe'en night, when Alvin Martin's haystack caught fire.
