Car Cuts Cost of Teachers' Tour

Current European news has a special interest for the Misses Cyretta and Golda Morford, teachers in the Detroit public schools, for they toured the Continent on the very eve of the war, using their own car to penetrate to out-of-the-way places which ordinary tourists miss. A second advantage in their "drive-yourself" tour was its much lower cost—$555 a person from Detroit to Detroit. They were away 10 weeks and drove 5,000 miles abroad. Several of the spots shown here echoed to the sound of bombing within a few weeks after the pictures were taken. And the atmosphere in all of them has undergone a change as war's imminence became war's actuality.
