

OWL LAFFS

A WISE OWL

Here it is Farm Show time and believe you me I always have myself a good time.

A downtown hubby upped to his wife and bellowed, "These trousers wear like iron."

Which reminds us that nowadays women marry in haste and repeat at leisure.

Here's a honey some kind reader sent us and we sure do appreciate it. We hear that Bill Dellinger and Chet Bailey went to Coatsville last Saturday afternoon to attend the Brown-Light wedding.

According to a certain father, in this vicinity, most all schools are finishing schools. They about finish up the bank balance.

At this time of the year most folks wonder what colleges offer besides Saturday football games.

Cappy Mumma says that "the baby who didn't learn to talk until she was four, is a woman who is making up for lost time now."

A Salunga papa avers that: "A woman never knows what she wants or else she wants what her neighbor has and she can't afford."

According to Pete Ellis: "Life is just one tank of gasoline after another."

Was talking to a fellow from out Donegal Springs way and I know just how he feels. He explains: "I always feel pretty smart after listening to some of the dumb answers on these intelligence programs."

Our eminent "problem-figurer" has finally come to the conclusion that, "the reason why we have a thing as alimony is because you can buy silence."

One of our lovely blondes asked her brunette girl friend: "Do you think I ought to let my hair grow?"

You know, a woman's face used to be her fortune. Now it's the druggists.

Say, you old married men, here's something for you to read and give thought. We've been told that the trouble with a lot of marriages is "Hubby is so busy bringing home the bacon that he forgets to bring home the applesauce."

We know a gal who's so dumb that she thinks a grass widow is a woman whose husband ran off with a Hula dancer.

Just had a letter from some folks over Marietta way who celebrated their silver wedding anniversary. They received a great deal of lovely silver, so much so in fact, the gent's Scotch uncle sent them some silver polish as his gift.

Bill says: "Opportunity knocks for every man, but a woman gets a ring."

An E'town hubby had a spat with

Aunt Min: "That Wuz a Purty Good Letter, I Sez To Myself"

We wuz havin' a meetin' of the missionary society at our church the other night'n up'n speaks the president....."Min Bunche, will you kindly write this here foreign missionary'n tell him to comen give us a speech, fer our next meetin'?"

Sure, sez I.....that's nuthin'! When I got home I started in thinkin' I'd better get that letter writ so's the man would have time to collect his thoughts fer his speech.

I got out my pen'n ink from the top shelf'a my cupboard'n started in. I got the date on o. k'n, I got the man's name o. k., but it started in botherin' me whether I ought'a say "Dear Mr. Smith.....Dear Brother Smith'er had I ought'a say Brother Missionary.....I settled with sayin' "Dear Brother Missionary Smith" 'N it looked o. k.

Now come the rub! What ought 'a body say next!.....fer instance, ought I tell him we'd been havin' a hard time gettin' speakers'n knowin' he must be kind-hearted'er else he wouldn't be a missionary, 'er sumpin' like that, we hoped he'd comen give us a talk about all them starvin' Armenians'n things?.....'er should I say knowin' as how he's a good talker we'd like to hear a good speech like he could give.

I tore up pretty near a half tablet of writin' paper!.....It wuz growin' later'n later'n words kept comin' harder'n harder.....Fer land sakes, Min, think I.....ain't you smart enough to write to a foreign missionary? Then I got my dutch up'n I got right eloquent 'n stuck in fancy words'n stuff'n I sent it off in the letter box'n went to bed.

Next mornin' I read over my rough copy'a what I wrote that missionary'n thinkin' it's pretty swell, I let Jen read it out loud'n she started in readin', sayin': "Dear Brother Missionary Smith.....I pen these here few words from the bottom'a my heart, fer knowin' as how's you been mixed up with the heathen fer so many years, we invite you to spend a evening with us. We know sumpin' about them poor starvin' Armenians'n stuff, but maybe you can tell us more'n it might help some of us to refrain from so much luxury'n eatin' if we get a idea of how some poor souls would be disgusted if they'd see us eatin' at our covered dish suppers.

We will have a big turnout fer to greet you'n hope you will get here safe'n sound. The ladies'll give a nice set out when your done talkin'.

With lovin' thoughts to you'n all the other heathen, I am Your friend, Min Bunche."

The Low Down From Hickory Grove

Anybody who has been kinds drifting along and not paying too much attention to what is going on down on the prodigal Potomac, they can now read the New Census figures—and commence to ponder. And any pondering to be done should start pronto. After Nov. 5th it will be a useless kind of occupation.

The census figures tell the story—plain as the nose on Mr. Durante's face. Of the 48 states and the District of Columbia, the Champion gainer in population is the District of Columbia. In 10 years the population there, has increased 36 percent. And brother, every one of these folks are on your payroll. And none of 'em produce anything unless maybe you can call producing their expense account each month as producing something.

We gained 7 percent in population in the whole U. S. A. in 10 years, but it now takes 36 per cent more people in Washington, to watch us. Anybody who has been thinking that whatever is troubling us will blow over, and everything will be O. K., and overlooks voting—he is gonna need some nice cracked ice for his brow, on November 6th. Yours with the low down,

Brain Tumor Detected With Electric 'Brain'

An electrical "brain" that analyzes the human brain—determining whether the owner is mentally ill and the nature of the illness, and detecting the presence and defining the location of a brain tumor—recently attracted the attention of doctors at the scientific exhibition of the American Medical association in Seattle.

The device, technically known as an electro-encephalograph, was exhibited by its designers, Dr. Frederick A. Gibbs, W. G. Lennox and A. M. Grass of the Boston City hospital.

The electrical brain detects and records the waves that are generated by millions of tiny "dynamos" in the human brain, sorts them out according to wave length and energy and draws a spectrum of them so that the scientists can analyze the contents of a brain.

Discovery of the method of analysis was announced a year ago by the Boston City hospital scientists and has since then have studied thousands of brains, ill and normal, and have discovered that the principal peak in the spectrum curve gives an index of the mental state of the individual. Schizophrenia, the disease of split personality, has a principal wave frequency of 10 per second, and the epileptic, when a shock is approaching, moves the principal wave frequency to 9 per second.

The normal person, Dr. Gibbs explained, has a brain wave spectrum ranging from 1 to 50 waves per second, with the greater amounts of energy in the lower frequencies. When abnormal conditions arise the energy shifts from the higher to the lower frequencies.

"The brain can be likened to a great electrical network into which a great many powerhouses are conducting electricity, each one at a different frequency. Some of them flare up to great strength and others die down. We can't see the powerhouses, but by measuring the voltage of each frequency we can tell which powerhouses there has been some change in activity and, perhaps, what caused it.

Innocent Suspects Freed After Lie Detector Tests Lie detector tests were recently described as of primary importance to innocent persons, as well as extremely valuable in the disclosure of those with guilty consciences.

Detective-Lieut. Harold Mulbar, an expert for the state police in Michigan, revealed that the polygraph tests last year cleared half of the suspects who submitted to them.

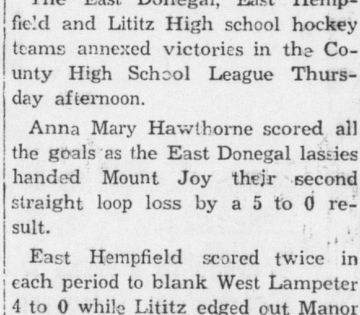

"Of 222 suspects, 111 were cleared, 98 were found to indicate deception, 49 made confessions and the other 13 were of a mentality which could not be tested adequately," he said.

Mulbar confirmed an International City Managers' association report that the lie detector is an economical device. He estimated that it eliminated $25,000 worth of police investigation in 1938.

The association report declared that lie detectors are standard police equipment now in 15 cities, seven in Michigan including Michigan and the federal bureau of identification. In Evanston, Ill., and Wichita, Kan., all applicants for police jobs must take the tests. In East Cleveland, tests are given all applicants for civil service positions.

Pronunciations Differ In Quebec they spell it Juliette. Most of the towners call it Jolyette but a few ritized it to Zholy-aye. In Wisconsin there is a burg spelled Allouez. Natives say Alo-weez. Purists claim it should be Alo-way.
