THE EDITOR'S VOICE

The prolonged siege of war is beginning to tell on Germany—and no one knows just what conditions are like. They have gone so far as to legalize dog meat for human consumption, saying it is as good as beef.

While the British have not as yet conquered Germany, they are making them "eat dog" and like it.

Time To Work

This is the time for labor, no less than capital, to show its patriotism.

There can be no further excuse for unjustified strikes, which could be prevented by honest arbitration, for labor racketeering of any kind, or for wage and hour demands which go beyond all reason, and which slow defense production.

If labor has any just grievances, conciliation can cure them. Public opinion, that mightiest of corrective forces, will always support the exploited, and see that the exploiter is controlled. And, by the same token, public opinion will, and rightly, give short shrift to those who seek to promote industrial warfare.

The Zero Hour

The very noble bird, the turkey, approaches the end of November in fear and trembling. The fatter the fowl the greater the danger. Back in the old days, the serving of a glistening, savory, brown-skinned bizzard was not such a rare occasion. We consider it sort of a fete-day when the menu contains turkey, for to most tables turkey is a party dish. Our rugged ancestors lacked much in the way of cauliflower, brussel sprouts, pistachio nuts and maple mousse, but they could certainly take their turkey as a matter of course. As enjoyable, as is the sight of the bird reposing in state on the flat of its back with garnishes and accessories spread round about, there comes a time when it loses some of its appeal. A slack season in the turkey appetite when we get it sliced cold, as hash, as turkey gumbo, as turkey croquettes, and trying to fool us in a gravy.

Our Importance

When trying to dial a favorite radio program and the air is crowded with big talking and loud music that drowns out your station and twisting the dials only makes matters worse, then is when you complain that all a fellow needs these days to start a broadcasting station is a coffee pot and a length of wire!

But with all of the listed radio stations in the U. S., there are only 21 stations located in towns under 10,000 population. There are 3,084 counties in the land and of these 2,457 include NO TOWN OF OVER 10,000 POPULATION. Subtract the 21 and you can figure on 2,436 counties that have only one way of imparting the local news—the weekly newspaper. When you realize that 58.6% of the total U. S. families live in small towns or rural areas, you can appreciate why the weekly newspaper feels important.

The Thanksgiving Gift

For our bounties we join in prayerful thanksgiving. For courage, liberty and happiness, we sing a song of gratitude in recompense. In appreciation of favors received we bow our head in earnest supplication.

Each of us, though in his own private world suffers from sadness and worry, strike a renewed note at Thanksgiving time, the theme of gratitude for our individual blessings.

We "give thanks unto the Lord, and call upon his name," as is fitting, for whence cometh our benevolences? We must also give praise to our fellowmen who, directly and indirectly, have taken part in contributing to our benefactions. However, poorer may be this other world which adds to yours and to mine, what world, though under-privileged and hard-pressed, will feel that their lot is better than that of thousands of others.

No matter how much we own, how small our possessions, the important point is how much do we enjoy what we have and do we appraise our gifts with gratitude. We must remember that gratitude has the great power of enlarging small pleasures and shrinking profound miseries.

We hear little of a modern pilgrim, for that name indicative of courage and fortitude, seems to have disappeared with the first celebration of Thanksgiving, when fifty stalwart souls poured out their prayer of praise. The sceptic, who in his discontent, derides our state as sentimental and idealistic, fails to see that being thankful is simply using good common sense. This nation was founded on gratitude by a tried people living to create a present and not daring to look into the future, but striving to find a nation daily, through being happy for those necessities which they enjoyed as they hued the wood, hunted the game, raised the grain, struggled and sacrificed for a stronger state that was to endure as a great nation of a great people.

We share one deep blessing with those who understand the understanding of the Lord's goodness, His hand in our lives and that through His hand today can find good cause to rejoice.

Sneeze by Stroboscope

That respiratory diseases may be spread through the expulsion of germs in a sneeze or cough is fairly generally known. With the aid of a comparatively new photographic process, which can take 600 pictures a second, an investigation was underway to determine how widely and rapidly the droplets in a sneeze spread. The investigators hoped their findings would be of some help in the battle against respiratory diseases.

The photographic process used was that invented by Dr. Harold Edgerton of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Called stroboscopic photography, the process differs from ordinary photography in that the camera shutter is left open and the light (supplied by a gas-filled tube, or stroboscope) is broken into 36,000 flashes a minute. Impressions are left on the photographic plate each time the light flashes; in ordinary photography the light remains constant and the camera shutter opens and closes.

Heading the research into the common sneeze was one of Dr. Edgerton's colleagues at M. I. T., Prof. Marshall W. Jenkinson of the department of biology and public health. Using Edgerton's technique, Professor Jenkinson made several photographs of the effect of a sneeze. Among his early findings:

Near the end of a sneeze, the mouth closes involuntarily and propels at high speed (two miles a minute) a great number of droplets through the restricted opening.

In a single spasm, thousands of droplets ranging down to one two-hundred-and-fiftieth of an inch in diameter are expelled.

The smallest of these drops evaporate but others are left floating in the air. These particles may be distributed to other persons.

Compared with the number of drops issuing from the mouth, those coming from the nose are insignificant.

In general, coughing gives forth fewer but larger droplets than sneezing.

Summers Getting Hotter, Claims Weather Bureau

Many of us incline to grin indulgently when the old folks dash the perspiration from their brows and grumblingly assert that when they were young the weather was pleasant in the summertime and not torrid as it is today. We wink and, like as not, say to ourselves that distant things seem pleasantest, and the only reason why Dad and Granddad imagine those long-gone summers to have been more mild is because they are victims of the very human tendency to forget the unpleasant and recall only the serene and balmy days.

However, we are wrong and the old folks are right. The summers are hotter now than they were when the horseless buggy was an object at which to gape. And if you have any doubt about it, there are the statistics of the weather bureau as ineluctable proof of the fact.

According to the bureau's charts the average summer temperature has jumped by at least three degrees during the last 20 years. This is really a phenomenal advance, and a rise of an average of three degrees means but one thing—that there have been a good many scorching hot days.

The weather bureau is quite frank in admitting that it does not know how to account for this rise in general summer temperature.

How President Resigns

A President or vice president of the United States may resign by signing a written statement of resignation and forwarding it to the department of state—not to the legislative or judicial branch of the government. This procedure is set forth in a federal law adopted in 1792 and still in effect. The law says in part: "A resignation of the office of President or Vice President shall be an instrument in writing declaring the same . . . and delivered into the office of the Secretary of State." No President has ever resigned, but one vice president has—John C. Calhoun of South Carolina. He quit the vice presidency in 1832 in order to become a senator.

Sizing for Rugs

Rugs in constant use frequently lose their shape and just won't lay down because the sizing on the under side has deteriorated. According to the extension service of the University of Nebraska agriculture college, the life of such rugs may be prolonged by resizing them. First thoroughly clean the rug by shampooing and let it dry. Then tack it napside down on the floor and apply a solution of one part glue (one-fourth pound) and eight parts water (two quarts). If the rug is light weight, be sure not to put on so much glue that it penetrates to the right side. After application of the sizing, let the rug dry for 24 hours before relaying.

Accidental Burns

Accidental burns, exclusive of conflagrations, are the only type of home accidents in which more women than men are injured fatally. Fatal burns in the home occur about twice as frequently among women as men.

Wise Advertisers Advertise In A Paper That Has Reader Interest

The Bulletin is ever conscious of the fact that an advertiser, in order to realize the maximum of return from the money invested, must buy something more than just type and white space. No ad can be effective unless the paper in which it appears has READER INTEREST.

In order to add interest to advertisements, the Bulletin publishes all the local news, church matters, owl laffs, dutch letters, markets and what not. People read one or more of the above subjects, lay the Bulletin aside and along comes the next member of the family and reads his or her article of interest and so on down the family. During all that time your advertisement may have been seen and read by one or half a dozen people.

How many of you read the average circular dropped at your door? You can best and most truthfully answer that.

If you want good returns for money expended, put your ad in a newspaper that is read by thousands of careful, scrutinizing readers.

Because of the latter fact, WISE ADVERTISERS ADVERTISE IN ITS COLUMNS.
