Watch Silo Walls, Farmers Warned

Farmers who contemplate putting up grass silage are being reminded by agricultural engineers to check the reinforcements around their silo wall and to make sure the inner silo surface has a protective coating.

Grass silage exerts a greater bursting pressure in silos than does normal corn silage, and its juices are more strongly acid, and hence more likely to corrode masonry walls than corn silage.

Fall Plowing

When plowing for wheat this fall it is best to "jump" all draws where grasses have healed old gullies. Where raw gullies are plowed in, it will pay to work them down at once and sow them to grasses or winter barley. With the remainder of the field left rough until wheat sowing time, fall rains will soak into the soil instead of gathering into the old gullies. By the time the wheat crop is sown, the gullies will be protected by the mass of grass roots.

FARM COUPLES OFFERED ADVICE

Newlywed Couples Are Warned to Save Early.

The voice of experience from 472 farm families who kept home account records during 1939 tells young married couples on the farm where their money probably will go in the years to come. These records were summarized by home accounts specialists from the University of Illinois college of agriculture.

First of all newlyweds will find that undoubtedly the money value of their living and savings will increase from the first five years they are married until around the time they will celebrate their silver wedding anniversary. From then on, it's pretty likely to decline. So say those who have been paying the bills these many years. Advice given is to plan ahead for the peak times of expense.

Savings increase during this same period of marriage and then decline gradually. The decline is the result primarily of the decline in life insurance payments and payment of principal, say home accounts specialists. However, there usually is an increase in other investments for old age.

Newlyweds won't have to worry much about the food bills during the first four years of their married life, but they will have to figure on furnishing and equipping their home then. Clothing bills are lowest at this period, because there are few people in the family, but the highest average amount for clothing usually is spent by women married one to four years—a fact of interest to all husbands.

During the five to nine years married period, young folks might as well figure on doctor bills and medical expense for babies. Other items will have to be budgeted accordingly. There was a tendency for operating expenses for the household to go up gradually over a period of years. However, it is higher during the five to nine year period probably because of additional services needed while the children were small.

Cash outlay for housing and recreational equipment reaches its peak during the 10 to 15 year marriage period. Families might as well figure right now that they will spend a great deal of money keeping up with expenses in the 15 to 25 year married period, for this is the time when savings, food, clothing, recreation, and education, other than college, reach their peak and cause a drain on the purse. Usually the children are in high school. Furnishings and equipment reach their second highest peak at this time, largely because furnishings have to be replaced and parents wish to make their home as attractive as possible for the young people.

College expenses start showing up in the budget during the 15 to 25 years married period, but reach their peak in the following 10 years. Church contributions and community welfare are major items at this time.

After a couple has been married 35 years, their chief type of savings goes into investments. This is probably because families are recouping funds expended on the children during earlier periods and also are saving for old age, the specialists explain. Transportation costs and gifts are at their peak during this period, probably because the couple has fewer obligations and finally has a chance to travel. The gifts mainly went to grown children of the family to help them establish their own homes.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Chlorena, Cre-so-fec and Chex-R-Ton are handled by our local distributor for flock owners who help control the colds that may develop in their chickens. He has complete directions for their use.

When Chickens Have Bad Colds What Do You Do?

Simple Precautions Help Protect Flock's Health.

Whenever you have a bad cold you try to get lots of rest, keep warm, perhaps take a mild laxative, and eat foods rich in vitamins, because you have found these things aid nature in throwing off the cold.

It's just as possible to help a hen throw off her cold, according to Grafton Lohrop, head of the Sanitation Department, Purina Mills. "Although no one seems to know just what causes colds in humans, research in recent years has demonstrated that colds in chickens are caused by a specific germ infection. Unfavorable surroundings such as poorly ventilated, drafty houses or exposure to cold wet weather will reduce the resistance of a flock and render it more susceptible to this infection. The need for good care, adequate nutrition and a sanitation program which will help prevent the introduction of this infection is readily apparent."

Colds in chickens as a rule begin with a thin nasal discharge followed by a collection of cheesy material in the sinuses of the head and a swelling about the eyes. The affected bird shows a loss of appetite, falls off in production and bodyweight, and becomes droopy.

If infectious colds should break out in your flock, Lohrop suggests the following seven-point poultry sanitation program—

- 1. Eliminate drafts, dampness and crowding.
2. Scrub fountains with a stiff brush daily and disinfect with a Chlorena solution.
3. Give the birds a mild flush if it appears necessary.
4. Clean the poultry house thoroughly and disinfect with a Cre-so-fec solution. Supply plenty of dry litter.
5. Immediately remove the sick birds and burn those which die.
6. When evidence of colds is first observed, close the house and dust the birds with Chlorena Powder until they sneeze freely. Repeat with light dustings daily until the birds show improvement.
7. Keep the birds on full feed. If feed consumption drops, feed Layena checkers at night. To further increase feed consumption it may be advisable to add to the laying mash an appetizer like Chex-R-Ton.

SOIL DRAINAGE IMPROVES LAND

Lower Water Table Aids Better Root Growth.

By H. B. ROE (Professor of Agricultural Engineering, University Farm, St. Paul.) Proper soil drainage does not rob the land of needed moisture during times of drouth, but instead it helps plants develop deep roots early in the season thus resulting in better crop yields. Drouths have been no more severe in this country since drainage programs were started about 1905.

In the spring of the year or during periods of excessive rainfall, fields often become saturated with moisture and the water table, or level of "free" water, comes close to the surface. The roots of most crop plants cannot live long in "free" water and they will not grow down into it, but instead, they mature while still very short and shallow and after that practically cease to grow. As a result, when later dry spells come along, evaporation takes place, the "free" water surface drops and the topsoil dries out, leaving the shallow rooted plants "high and dry." Poor quality and yields of crops thus result from poor drainage.

The drainage removes only the excess or free water from the ground, it cannot drain off the capillary moisture that surrounds each grain of soil and is so necessary for plant growth. When the land is tiled, drained, excess water is taken off early in the spring and plants develop normal, vigorous roots that are better able to reach moisture during dry periods.

That shortage of soil moisture is not caused by open drain ditches, is proved by a study made in 1929, with state and federal agencies co-operating. It was found that where ditches average about eight feet deep, with two feet of water in them, no drainage effect was evident beyond 330 feet away from the ditch, and the average lowering of the moisture level by ditches a mile apart was only three inches. This has only a negligible influence.

Drainage programs started in Minnesota in 1907 have not been the cause of our recent dry years. During the 20-year period 1882 to 1901, Minnesota enjoyed an average of only one inch more rainfall per year than during the "drouth" period of 1918 to 1937, and going still farther back, the period from 1837 to 1856 was even drier, with an average precipitation nearly two inches below the 1918 to 1937 level.

Building up the terrace ridge, rather than tearing it down, is easiest when farming operations are parallel to the terrace. Back furrowing to the ridge when plowing is probably the most effective. Disking also helps when the ridge is not straddled, especially with a single disk.

Cultivating parallel to the terraces eliminates the possibility of loosening the soil on top of the ridge which may result in over-topping of the terrace during a heavy rain. This often occurs when the direction of cultivation is across the terrace, since the depth is difficult to regulate when crossing. The ridge height may be lowered several inches as a result of one crop of corn.

If more maintenance is required, Hansen recommends a few rounds with a blade grader to keep terraces working efficiently.
