One Extra Pint of Milk
Each Milking Makes Feed
Worth $8.00 More Per Ton

Results of experiments at the Purina Experimental Farm show that a cow may consistently produce 15 pounds of milk per milking on one ration and 16 on another. Although that extra pound is only a pint more and hardly shows in the pail, it really does add up to quite a sum.

This is the way it figures. If a cow is fed 10 pounds of a dairy ration each day and milks 30 pounds of milk daily, that means a pretty fair return on the feed she eats, if milk is sold at $2.00 per hundred weight. However, if she is fed the same amount of a better feed and gives one pint more each milking, that feed is worth two cents more per milking or four cents more per day. In other words, the better feed is worth four cents more for each ten pounds, forty cents more per hundred, or eight dollars more per ton.

An extra pint more per milking does make a difference. While it is hard to tell whether there are 15 or 16 pounds of milk in a milk pail, it's still harder to tell by just looking at a feed whether it will produce 15 or 16 pounds of milk. Two feeds that look alike may produce entirely different results when fed to the cow. It all depends on the ingredients in the feed, their quality, and how they are blended.

Editor's Note: Our local Purina feed dealer has checkerboard dairy rations to be fed straight with home grown roughage. He also has checkerboard dairy concentrates to be mixed with home grown grains to make up dairy rations that are fed with home grown roughage. He will be happy to advise cow owners how to feed their herds to the best advantage, using as much of their home grown feed as possible.

People, Spots In The News

PICK-A-BACK CRASH . . . Two Royal Canadian Air Force student pilots brought their planes down thus near MacLeod, Alberta. They collided 50 feet above ground and became interlocked. Pilot "on top" shut off his motor and rode in so safely, neither pilot was injured.

AID ADVOCATE . . . Wendell Wilkie, showing telling reporters about his extraordinary whirlwind inspection trip to England. The defeated 1940 Republican presidential candidate was trump witness in "lend-lease bill" hearings, advocating aid to Britain on bill's terms as less likely to involve U. S. in actual war than withholding of such aid.

The reason some fellows won't look for a job is because they would rather hold on to their stiff neck.
