CHANGE OFFICE HOURS FOR STATE SERVICE

The Pennsylvania State Employment and Unemployment Compensation Service will change its office hours for Mount Joy from Tuesday to Friday afternoon, starting Friday, April 25 (2:30 to 4:30 o'clock). There will be no office hours on Tuesday, April 22 at Mount Joy. The office is conducted in the Friendship Fire Hall and is open for both those who wish to make claims for unemployment compensation and those who are simply looking for employment.

The State Employment Service is showing on its bulletin board, posted every day that the office is open at Mt. Joy, a list of the hundreds of jobs now available for men and women of various types and skills. Many of these are for Defense industries both in the county and outside. The office has been placing over a hundred a week but is still unable to fill fifty per cent of the orders received. Any one who is unemployed should register and those who have had some experience in operating production machines but who are now working on less skilled lines should also register in order that the country's Defense program can meet the emergency demand placed upon it.

New Variety of Tomato Resists Serious Disease

Commercial growers in the Pacific coast region, who grow tomatoes for canning, now have a new variety that is resistant to Verticillium wilt, a disease that had become so serious in some areas that it was difficult to grow a profitable commercial crop.

The new variety, known as Essar, was developed by the federal bureau of plant industry in co-operation with the California state experiment station. The Essar not only is superior in wilt resistance, but produces a better product for canning than certain varieties formerly used. It is available to growers this year.

Failure of standard varieties under disease conditions is an old story to plant breeders, says Dr. Victor R. Boswell, in charge of vegetable investigations for the bureau. If a new disease appears and the plant does not possess resistant characters in its hereditary make-up, then it is the job of the plant breeders to develop a variety that does have the hereditary characters to withstand the disease.

The Essar was developed from a chance hybrid found by Dr. Michael Shapovalov, bureau pathologist, and Dr. B. A. Rudolph of the California agricultural station. Several lines were grown from this single plant selection. After testing under wilt conditions, one resistant line was selected after eight generations because of its uniformity of the vine and fruit. Before it was released it was carried through two more generations to make sure it retained its disease resistance and uniform characteristics.

Properly Balanced Diet Must Contain Vitamin D

Somewhere in the array of the "balanced diet" made up of meats, fruits, and vegetables can be found all the vitamins—all but one. That is vitamin D, the "sunshine" vitamin, important in the formation of normal teeth and bones. It is especially important during infancy and childhood to help prevent rickets and tooth decay.

This scarcity of vitamin D becomes especially important when one realizes that over 90 per cent of the American people suffer from dental decay. The reason given by many investigators is "inadequate intake of calcium and phosphorus, and insufficient vitamin D to enable the body to utilize these minerals." All of the other vitamins are found in adequate amounts in a carefully chosen diet, but vitamin D is limited.

Our common foods with the exception of egg yolk, and to a variable and slight degree, butter, cream and milk, contain practically none of it. Vegetables, fruit, meats and cereals are all lacking in this factor.

The only other sources remaining are sunlight which, however, is weak and undependable especially during the winter months, or milk and other foods in which standardized amounts of vitamin D have been incorporated either by irradiation, or by the addition of the vitamin D concentrate, or by feeding irradiated yeast to cows.

Georgia Marriage Laws

Marriage of a 12-year-old Georgia girl to a 51-year-old man has revived interest in that state's unusual laws regarding marriage and divorce. Legal age limits for issuance of marriage licenses, for example, are 14 years for females and 17 for males. Common law marriages, however, are recognized legally regardless of age. Supreme court precedent also holds that a child can be forced to forfeit its privilege of attending public school because of the mother's conduct, although the child and father may be innocent of misconduct. Georgia divorce laws also have a quirk in providing that a husband and wife may be legally divorced, leaving one free to marry again and the other prevented from remarrying. The "one-side" divorce law has caused numerous bigamy charges. Georgia code also rules that an "ordained colored minister of the gospel may celebrate marriages between persons of African descent only."

Asphalt Ancient Product

Asphalt, commonly used in this country today for street coatings, roofing paints and similar preservatives, was not employed in the United States until 1838 when sidewalks in Philadelphia were made of it. It had been used by the Europeans in floor construction for many centuries, and so important was asphalt in ancient times that Herodotus wrote a booklet on "Asphalt and its uses to Man" in 450 B. C. There is a statue in the Louvre, Paris, to which shells were attached by means of asphalt by its Babylonian sculptors 5,000 years ago. They are still held firmly in place.

Word "Drug" Defined

A "drug" is any substance used as a medicine, or in making medicines, for internal or external use; also, formerly, any stuff used in dyeing or in chemical operations. According to the pure food and drug act the term "drug" includes "all medicines and preparations recognized in the United States Pharmacopoeia and National Formulary for internal or external use, and any substance or mixture of substances intended to be used for the cure, mitigation, or prevention of disease of either man or other animals."
