The fire report for the year 1941 places the fire loss for Mount Joy boro at $3481. The company answered 34 calls during the year; 24 in the country and ten in the boro, and the loss during the year was $85,991.81, not including the lumberyard at Rohrerstown.

Three new members were admitted, James Markley, Harold Schneider and Harold Keck. The company announced the death of J. A. Felker, his death claim will be paid to his widow. Committees for the year were appointed as follows: Membership John Hendrix, chairman, John Gengrich and Roscoe Hassinger; Financial, Roy Shaeffer, chairman John D. Miller and John Charles; Custodians, James Shaeffer, chairman, Harry Hendrix, John Wealand and Michael Good; Auditors Charles Esleman, Earl Miller and Charles Bennett, Jr. A committee to formulate a new set of house rules, was appointed to be made up of Edgar Hagenberger, James Pennell, Richard Divet, Mahlon Foreman and Ray Myers.

The company received $9 for pumping water during December. The E.N.T. committee turned over to the company $10 from the sale of soft drinks, and a certificate of deposit from the E.N.T. account was transferred to the building fund to pay current expenses. A windshield was purchased for the Dodge truck, and liability and property insurance was received on the two new engines. The company decided to purchase 200 feet of 2 1/2-inch hose, and investigate the advisability of purchasing a fog nozzle. The amendment installing the board of chiefs "as fire police" passed its final reading. The organization was reminded of the home talent show to be presented January 14 and 15 by the Fire Company Auxiliary.

Private Boots Sargeant In the Pants Just Once CAMP WOLTERS, TEXAS.-At least this is the story: When Harry D. Brunner, Brooklyn, N. Y., was promoted to be sergeant, a private barracks-mate, said: "All my life I've wanted to boot a sergeant in the seat of the pants. Now you and I are pretty good friends, so I'm asking you to grant me my wish." And-it's reported-the sergeant graciously complied.

Mailman Discovers New Type of Peril on Job ALAMEDA, CALIF.- Postman Ross Smith, who has carried the mail for 10 years, knows every dog on the route, but he never suspected the letter box at one house on the corner. "Snap" went the mailbox while Postman Smith was delivering a letter. His finger was held fast. Finally police were called. They tore the offending mailbox apart. Now Postman Smith watches mailboxes instead of dogs.

Mummified Miniature Man Found in Rockies

One of the most unique anthropological finds ever recorded on this continent was made in October, 1932, in the Pedro mountains, a chain of the Rockies, about 65 miles southwest of Casper, Wyo., by two gold prospectors, Frank Gurr and Cecil M. Main. These men were blasting with dynamite in a gulch at the foot of one of the chains of mountains comprising a rugged range. The explosion opened up a natural cave approximately 15 feet by four feet wide and four feet deep. Upon closer investigation, Main discovered, after crawling on his hands and knees through the small opening, an archeological freak in the form of a mummified miniature man, squatting on a rocky ledge with arms folded, head bowed slightly and legs in a semi-kneeling posture.

The little pygmy measures 6 1/2 inches in its squatting position, approximately 12 to 20 inches in standing position, weighs three-fourths of a pound, but is thought to have been much heavier in life. The noticeable features are the bronze skin, low forehead, flat nose, flat, unintelligent head with a fringe of black and gray hair. The sex of the specimen is plainly masculine, with its determining organs well preserved. It has a full set of teeth and its eyes, although glazed, appear distinctly. It is estimated that the pygmy was approximately 65 years old at death. There are noticeable traces of very fine hair on the body. An X-ray picture of the mummy, reveals human vertebrae and all other identifiable bones of the body, even to the muscles. The left clavicle bone shows a fracture and marks on the body indicate that death undoubtedly resulted from wounds. Also discernible by X-ray is the food in the stomach, which appears to have been raw meat. The teeth in the front of the mouth are pointed and of the flesh-eating variety.

Convert Waste of Citrus Orchards Into Dry Feed Florida is now using its tremendous crop of grapefruit and oranges to produce milk, butter and other dairy products. It has been discovered that the pulp of citrus fruits can be dried and ground up to make a nutritious and valuable food for much cows and beef cattle.

Florida rates next to Texas as a cattle-raising section. Around Kissimmee and Arcadia over 1,300,000 head of cattle roam wide and fertile ranges. By actual test, it was reported by scientists P. T. Dix Arnold, Dr. R. B. Becker and Dr. W. M. Neal of the Florida State Agricultural station at Gainesville, the dried citrus pulp is just as high in nutritive value as dried beet pulp which has been widely used as a cattle feed for many years in other sections of the country. They tested milch cows fed on the grapefruit and orange feed diet and found that their milk production held up both in quantity and quality.

More than 18,000 tons of dried citrus pulp was processed as a cattle feed last year by plants in central part of Florida. A dozen new processing plants have gone up this year and a new industry seems to be on its way.
