The Red Cross Rooms will not send work to the homes until February because of the smallpox epidemic.

Men, Machines Too Few To Attain All Goals, Says Official

WASHINGTON.—A serious shortage of manpower and machinery for agriculture threatens to make some of the most important objectives of the department of agriculture's program of increased food production this year unattainable, a department spokesman said.

Specifically, it endangers milk production and the harvesting of soy beans and peanuts, two crops which the department of agriculture has persuaded farmers to grow this year to make up the deficiency in vegetable oils caused by the war in the Pacific.

An increase of 10 billion pounds in milk production to a total of 125 billion had been planned by the department for this year. But the most recent reports indicate that only half that projected increase will be achieved.

Cannot Obtain Help. The reason is not that milk production does not pay but that dairy farmers are unable to obtain help. Many of their skilled workers have been taken by the draft. For the services of the rest the farmer cannot afford to compete in wages with industry, especially war industry.

In some areas, especially Minnesota and Wisconsin, farmers have begun to sell their cows, because of this inability to get men to look after them. It is the small, or marginal, dairy farmer, who is said to be suffering most.

Although the first impact of the labor shortage has been on milk supplies it will inevitably have its effect also on the production of butter and cheese.

The latest reports this year indicated a soy bean crop 88 per cent greater than that of last year's output of 106,712,000 bushels. The peanut crop is expected to total 2,921,950,000 pounds, which is double 1941 production.

Short on Machinery. Soy beans and peanuts, however, have to be harvested by machinery and the farmers have been unable to obtain it. The harvesting machinery used for grain-producing regions. Both soy beans and peanuts are now in the harvesting stage, but much of the crop may never be gathered.

The department of agriculture spokesman who outlined these facts admitted that the department experts were greatly worried about the outlook. He did not say specifically that the remedy lay with the War Production board, who have it in their power to provide the labor and the machinery respectively, but he left it to be inferred.

Grows Morning Coffee In His Own Backyard

GLOUCESTER, MASS.—When a friend complained of the coffee shortage to Carmello Capillo, he just grinned: "Why don't you plant some yourself?"

"They're hardy folk in this old fishing port—been going down to the sea in ships for more than three centuries—but Capillo's off-hand remark shook them.

The soil right here in Gloucester is perfect for coffee raising," said the 56-year-old soda water concessionaire. "It's just that folks around here never tried to raise coffee beans before."

Sure, Capillo said, two years ago he bought some unroasted coffee, imported from Mexico, and as an experiment planted it in his backyard in the spring. By September, he said, the plants had yielded 20 pounds of beans.

"They looked like string bean vines," he said, "I picked the beans, shelled them, and had them roasted. Got seven pounds of the best coffee I ever tasted."

Japs Capture 'Peking Man' 4,000 Centuries Too Late CHUNGKING.—The famous "Peking Man" skull, believed by anthropologists to be 400,000 years old, has been seized by the Japanese and sent to Tokyo, according to information received from Peiping (Peking) recently.

The skull, known academically as Sinanthropus pekinensis, had disappeared from its case at Union Medical college, a Rockefeller-endowed institution.

The skull, complete with jaws, was hailed as one of the modern world's greatest archeological discoveries when it was excavated at Choukoutien, near Peiping.

Army Heeds This Father, Keeps Twins Together

CAMP UPTON, N. Y.—Clifton M. and Clifford M. Gydesen, 20-year-old twins of Lyons Falls, N. Y., arrived at Camp Upton bearing a note to the army from their father, Gyde J. Gydesen.

"These are my twins and I would like to have them together if you can, please," the note said. "This makes me four boys I have in the war." The army complied with the request.

Lined up here, in smart military formation, is a "squad" of the mighty locomotives that work night and day for Uncle Sam.

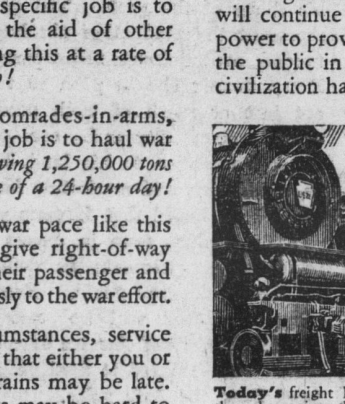

Passenger engines, their specific job to move troops. And, with the aid of other locomotives, they are doing this at a rate of over a million troops a month!

To the right are their comrades-in-arms, freight locomotives. Their job is to haul war materials. And they are moving 1,250,000 tons of freight a mile every minute of a 24-hour day!

Of course, to keep up a war pace like this requires the railroads to give right-of-way and a very large part of their passenger and freight equipment continuously to the war effort.

Naturally, under the circumstances, service to the public cannot be all that either you or we would like it to be. Trains may be late. Accommodations and seats may be hard to get. But—with the cooperation of travelers and shippers, the Office of Defense Transportation, the Army, the Navy and Government agencies—the railroads are doing, and will continue to do, everything within their power to provide the best service possible to the public in the midst of the greatest war civilization has ever known.

Today's freight locomotives can haul much heavier loads than the engines that served the nation in the last war.
