Science In The News

By ORSON D. MUNN, L.H.B., L.L.B., Sc.D., Editor, Scientific American

WAR lives literally off the fat of our land, for the basis of many explosives and other materials of war is glycerine, and glycerine is obtained from fats.

Consequently, the success of the waste fat salvage campaign conducted by the War Production Board and the Committee of the Glycerine and Associated Industries is of vital importance to the Nation's welfare.

If all the housewives of America cooperate in this drive, some 360,000,000 pounds or more of waste fats can be salvaged annually—enough to produce the glycerine needed to make 540,000,000 pounds of smokeless powder or correspondingly large quantities of nitro-glycerine, dynamite, essential drugs and antiseptics, and many other necessities of war.

All the housewife has to do to participate in this important salvage campaign is to make it her regular practice to strain all used cooking greases, after they have served their full use as food, into any clean can and store it in a cool place. When the can is full it should be taken to the local meat dealer, who will buy it and start the fat on its way to war. Three weeks after the dealer receives a pound of waste fat it has been made into glycerine and is being used to make some product our armed forces must have.

Here, for example, is what one pound—only 3 1/2 tablespoons—of waste fats means to the war production effort: It will supply enough glycerine to make the powder required for four 37 mm. anti-aircraft shells or 10 shells for a .50 calibre airplane cannon. This same amount of glycerine will be sufficient to fabricate three cellophane gas-mask bags or to make enough synthetic resin to camouflage one-fiftieth of the surface of a large tank. Glycerine also is needed for the recoil mechanism of big guns, for depth bomb release devices, to make dynamite, and many other essential war products.

The reason why housewives are urged—beggared, in fact—to help end the glycerine shortage by saving their waste kitchen fats is this: Glycerine has always been obtained for American uses as a by-product of other manufacturing operations, chiefly from the making of soap. The soap makers normally imported much of the fats and oils they used from the Pacific areas now big game by the Japs. With the war on, these manufacturers cannot make enough glycerine for peacetime uses, much less to provide for the greatly expanded needs of wartime consumption. Other sources of fats must be opened up, and the greatest of these sources is the American kitchen. Fats that ordinarily are poured down the sink, to the detriment of the drainage pipes, are rich in this desperately needed glycerine. Over a billion pounds of fat and grease were wasted every year in American households before Pearl Harbor.

All that has to be done to tap this source is to obtain the cooperation of housewives in getting the used fats from the kitchen to the processing plants where the glycerine can be extracted and started into war use.

From this you can readily see that no amount of waste fat is too small to save for salvage. Only by saving every drop, in fact, and delivering it regularly to the meat dealer, can we prevent an oft-quoted phrase, "too little and too late," from being applied to our glycerine supply.

"Tommy" is a FAST TALKER!

The Jap-ants were charging as the paratrooper landed. He turned to his "Tommy" gun.
"Start talking, Tommy," he said, "and talk FAST!"

Tommy guns can "talk" as fast as 800 rounds of ammunition per minute!
When war began, it was a serious problem whether America could make cartridges faster than the "Tommys" and the machine guns and the Garands could blast them out.

Ingenuity and electric power provided the answer! Today, power-driven machines turn out 80 cartridges every minute—removing dents, inspecting, rejecting—keeping pace with the rat-a-tats that are shooting our way to Victory! Power passes the ammunition.

But electric power is doing far, far more! It's helping to produce those Tommy guns, too—and tanks, ships, planes!
That takes a lot of power—and America's got it! Five times more than in the last war—more than all the Axis countries combined have now!

THERE ARE REFERENCES TO CUCUMBER PICKLES DATING BACK 4,000 YEARS, AND THE BRINING OR PICKLING METHOD IS STILL MOST IMPORTANT. THIS YEAR VAST QUANTITIES OF FOOD WILL BE CONSERVED BY MEANS OF SALT.
