Fire Damages Supplies At Shoe Factory

Friendship Fire Company extinguished a fire which damaged a storage house at the Gerberich-Payne Shoe Co., plant here about 10:30 o'clock Friday morning.

The fire is believed to have been started by spontaneous combustion in one corner of a concrete block building, separated from the main plant.

On the edge of the fire were huge transformers carrying electric current to the main plant. In the building were stored gasoline, rubber cement and materials for toes of shoes.

The burning materials caused gas fumes and firemen fought the blaze in gas masks.

Company officials said they could not estimate the damage at once. The drums containing gasoline and rubber cement were believed safe but the highly inflammable materials used for box toes in shoes, scarce because of the war, were destroyed or badly damaged.

Employees in the plant nearby remained at their work.

Because of the unusual materials which fed the flames firemen were unable to use water and resorted to chemicals.

The entire narrator's speech was given exactly as published in the Bulletin, the only difference being we censored it and brought the story up to date by giving the present personnel of the various organizations mentioned.

This particular reference does not apply to Mount Joy, Lancaster County but to the Mount Joy in close proximity to Valley Forge.

Just the same all were pleased to hear something about Mount Joy on the air.
