Farmers Can Get Needed Machinery

The nation's farmers, looked to for more food than ever before, now may obtain the more ordinary equipment simply by saying they need it.

The War Production Board coupled this new approach to the farm machinery problem last night with an order stepping up deliveries from producer to dealer.

Complaints have been heard in Congress and in administrative departments that farmers had to fill out too many forms, and wait too long to get what they needed in their work.

Effective next Monday, a farmer may buy up to $25 worth of 178 specifically-named items by certifying to his dealer that he is a farmer and requires the material now. If he wants to buy more than that, it can be arranged by having his county Farm Rationing committee sign the certificate—which is not a form and can be written on an ordinary piece of paper.

The growers, who sell to the Campbell Soup Company have contracted for a total of 2,300 acres of tomatoes, an increase of 400 acres over last year. Additional plants will be sent from New Jersey for replanting.
