A Winter Spectacle

By Elam B. Longenecker

"The heavens declare the glory of God," and nature reveals his handwork, exquisite in design, perfect in workmanship, and matchless in beauty.

Artist, paint me a picture. While men slept, God breathed on the landscape and beauty was born. Follow me down where the dreamy Chiques murmurs lazily on its way. Place your easel, stretch the canvas, and lay out your brushes. Now look around in wonder and amazement on the scenic beauty spread before your eyes with a prodigality that only nature could afford. "Is it snow?" you inquire. No. It isn't snow. It is fog, a deep dense fog which settled on trees, grass, fences and everything that could collect moisture.

Frozen fog, a half inch thick on all vegetation. Every branch of every tree, and every twig on every branch is clothed in fluffy, feathery whiteness, not a spot neglected, not a bud left unadorned, but each, alike had a share in the glorious transformation. Look upon it. Drink it in. Let your soul delight itself in the incomparable splendor so lavishly displayed. From horizon to horizon—and beyond, as far as the eye can reach—and farther, the panorama extends before your wondering gaze.

Painter exceed yourself. Catch it! Catch it! Capture a little of this rare and beautiful sight, almost a preview of that celestial glory which "eye hath not seen."

High overhead, the lace-like arbor spreads, a royal canopy of ethereal loveliness. Wave upon wave of regal splendor, multiplied and intensified by a dreamy winter sun peering drowsily through the mists.

This is the picture I want you to paint: A scenic marvel to make masters tremble.

The United States Asbestos Division has been turning out the brake linings and clutch facings so necessary to Army Transport Vehicles, and the asbestos cloth, packings and gaskets and asbestos insulation used in Submarines, PT Boats, Cruisers, Destroyers and Battleships. In addition to this, the company has also maintained a high production on friction products to keep essential trucks, buses, and war-workers' cars in operation.

Castor Beans Furnish Base for Insecticide

U. S. Can Grow Needed Poisons, Say Chemists

For a number of years the United States has been importing many millions of pounds of insecticides and the bases for insecticides from foreign sources, many of which are now cut off by the war. J. Edmund Good, vice president of a chemical company, told members of the Mid-American Chemurgic conference and the National Farm Chemurgic council at their joint convention in Cincinnati, recently.

Raw materials for the larger part of our food insecticide needs today can be grown right on the nation's farms, he continued. Probably 90 per cent of those importations upon which we formerly depended can be replaced with products from our own American farms. There is a direct connection between an adequate domestic supply of insecticides and our domestic crop of castor beans which was recently begun.

A newly developed insecticide, commercially called "Sprica Kest," is derived from the castor bean plant, because the stems and leaves. Because of the many uses for castor oil in vital war products, there has not been sufficient quantities of castor plants available to manufacture any important quantity of the new spray, Mr. Good said. This situation may improve, he went on, if dehydrated castor bean leaves can be obtained. We know that we will have to have very large tonnage of materials to meet 1944's demands for the finished product.

For example, one of the large citrus growers in Florida had a crop this year that was much greater and of better quality than last year, and was still better than the previous year's crop. This is the first year that he used the new insecticide exclusively.

Somewhat similar results were obtained with potatoes in Maine. Two or three years ago when we began experimenting with the spraying of vegetables, we watched those experiments very closely. The results obtained in the years 1942 and 1943 satisfy us that the spray will adequately protect vegetables from the insects that infest them, and will produce a better quality of vegetables. And remember, Mr. Good emphasized, that no imported materials need be used if castor beans were grown in this country in quantity.

All the possibilities of the new insecticide have not been explored and experimental work is going on continually. For instance, it has been combined with sulphur or copper and used in commercial applications for control of red spider, purple mite, six-spotted mite, rust mite, melon and many soft-bodied worms that infest vegetables.

It is not claimed that this insecticide will kill all insects. In some cases it seems to act as a repellent; in other cases as a contact poison on sucking insects such as aphids, thrips, lice, mealy bugs, leafhoppers, and red bugs; and controls chewing insects such as beetles, leaf rollers and caterpillars. A few of the many crop insects that have been reported to us as being controlled are:

Beets: Mexican bean beetles, aphids, leaf rollers.

Beets: Flea beetles, worms.

Cabbage: Imported cabbage worms, cabbage loopers.

Cucumbers: Melon aphids, melon worms, beetles.

Potatoes: Aphids, beetles, leaf hoppers, leaf rollers and flea beetles.

Spinach: Flea beetles, aphids, cabbage loopers, worms.

Tomatoes: Fruit worms, flea beetles.

Lettuce: Worms.

Pears: Aphids, weevils.

The purpose in mentioning these details and properties is not to emphasize one insecticide particularly, Mr. Good said in closing, but to point out that an efficient insecticide can be made from farm crops grown in the United States for the United States.

Expenditure of a few cents for a vermifuge, such as phenothiazine, for goats, is considered a good investment by veterinarians.

More than a million pounds of beeswax a year is needed for use in war products, adhesives, waterproofing for shells, belts, machinery, and protective covering for fighting planes.
