THE EDITOR'S VOICE

After serving this congressional district for the past seventeen years, J. Roland Kinzer decided to retire from political activity and immediately there were a score or more of candidates. Murray, Wood, Royer and even Harry Trout became ambitious but county chairman G. Graybill Diehm killed all their hopes. Mr. Diehm announced, after a conference, that candidacy will go to Chester County, which is part of this district.

PASSING THE BUCK

There has been so much controversy for and against a sewage system and disposal plant here that Boro Council decided to settle the pros and cons for the present at least. For weeks we have published information concerning sewage systems. On March 20 there will be a public meeting with two engineers to explain any questions one may wish to have answered, then at the Spring primary the voters will have the opportunity of saying yes or no. The decision of our taxpayers will guide council. What could be fairer?

GIRL SCOUTS

Salutations to the grand Girl Scouts of America whose birthday is celebrated this month. Building up a body of the finest type of youngsters, training in character self-reliance and community ideals, these Girl Scouts have made their organization a symbol of service. Through the war these young women, teenagers and less, have loyally cooperated, playing their vital part with adult understanding. Girl power becomes woman power and the women set the standard of our society. Resting the country's morality, responsibility, capability on the shoulders of such fine American girls bodies well for tomorrow's womanhood in leadership.

BACK TO CHURCH

There is no method of weighing on a scales or computing in numbers the force of spiritual good derived in our churches. We can count the membership but increased membership does not necessarily show how the church itself discharges its duties. One might say that if the denominations are having a gratifying growth, as they are today, then it follows that the church is growing in its teachings and good works. Since 1925 the church membership has grown faster than the population of the country and the number of various denominations has also grown. This formation of new sects may not be as pleasing to many a church-goer as though the larger number of bodies had the increased membership, but that the general trend is to the support of some religion is an encouraging note.

NOT ONLY HERE

Elsewhere there is criticism of the failure of government and industry to get going on a successful reconversion program and show ability in mastering shortages, strikes, inflation. This is a sore subject in Britain as well as America, where privation has been felt to a far greater extent and for seven years. During war the British housewife didn't voice her annoyance of cuts and rationing but today she is protesting new food restrictions and added bewildering government controls with all sorts of red tape to make life a maze. Workers there are not adapting themselves to a lower wage scale, absenteeism being their form of protest. Farmworkers have too tasted of better living and are not wishing to return to the land where it is also difficult to find housing.

Recently, the failure in the attempt to raise basic wages of farmworkers from $14 to $18 a week makes the British agricultural program disorganized. As we grumble about limited goods here at home, with the usual register of discontent, we should be very thankful that our living is still gracious, our cupboards are amply stocked, and should work to adapt ourselves and our country to a peacetime scale of living, diligently bringing order from a pretty kettle of fish.

MARCH

The days are chill and uncertain seem lonely though their daylight lengthens. The Tales of March was associated with death, the assassination of Julius Caesar, but we need not fear this month if we can see how touching is the way nature stirs to bring to earth the new generation. Weeds that seem asleep in winter woollens is developing its energy in the shafts of brief sunlight. The charmed circle of life develops its parts and takes form, perhaps hidden from the average eye, but most likely not if we but study carefully the remarkable features that the warmer soil is cradling and the sun is bidding. The bitter chill of nights and early morning is tempered for nature's purpose of strengthening, during the pleasant periods of March sunrises. Each day has something in store for us as our calendars come closer to the official heralding of spring. Swallows returning to Capistrano, humans returning north from wintering in southern climes, spring millinery promising much, winter yielding to solar force, elms and crowses shying before the brisk wind, spring peepers and croaking frogs reciting rituals in defiance of the draughts which threaten to overstay their engagement, all point to a faithfulness that should cheer the spirit as we button up our overcoats and coddle those colds in the head.

H. S. Alumni to Render

but she has become suspicious of his intentions and decided that the other relatives should share in her will.

At the opening of the play, one relative after another arrives and the excitement begins. Elvira overhears the conversation of Monte King and Edward Taylor in which they discuss what they will do if they had $25,000 to spend in one day. She tells them that she has decided to give each relative $25,000 with the understanding that it be spent in one day, and that they return and relate how they spent it. This announcement starts off a series of situations that makes this play one of the most exciting comedy drama ever published.

Tickets will soon be distributed and on sale. The price will be 50 cents and the reserved seat chart will be open at Sloans 8:00 a. m. on April 1. You can't afford to miss this play. Next week the names of those appearing in the cast will be published. Without a doubt this will be tops in entertainment.
