WHAT CAUSES LONG DISTANCE TRAFFIC JAMS

When more long distance calls are placed than our switchboards and lines can accommodate at one time, a traffic jam is the result. You can help relieve this jam by waiting until circuits are clear. An important part of the telephone industry's expansion program is an increase in long distance facilities. This can be completed only when material becomes available. Meanwhile, we ask your continued co-operation.

Aborigine Medicine

Ipecac, the root of the ipecacuanha shrub, was first used as a medicinal agent by the aborigines of South America. Some of the therapeutic root was brought to Europe, and fell into the hands of one Adrien Helvetius of Paris. Keeping the composition of his remedy secret, Helvetius used ipecac in the treatment of dysentery. His remarkable cures - advertised on sign cards at Parisian street corners - soon attracted the attention of Louis XIV, whose son the Dauphin lay ill with this disease. Helvetius cured the Dauphin and later sold his secret to Louis for the equivalent of $4,000. The ipecac root is still used in medicine today, as an expectorant and diaphoretic, but has been supplanted by other compounds in the treatment of dysentery.

A dentist says that bad temper will cause teeth decay. One of the meanest men we know has all of his own teeth, so that doesn't hold water.
