

OWL LAFFS A WISE OWL

How many of you folks fell for that old Auri Fool gag Tuesday? Well it's always a lot of fun no matter whom it hits.

They tell me a man at Lancaster was arrested for impersonating an officer. He took a handful of peanuts off a stand.

This morning a fellow asked me if I had another cigar like the one I gave him Sunday. He said he wanted to break his boy of smoking.

I told a recent bridegroom at Florin that I heard his wife had kissed every man in her home town.

He said: "Well what of it. That ain't such a big place."

Grant Gerberich tells me that most corporations have no souls. Evidently that doesn't apply to the Shoe Trust.

Recently a fellow wrote us asking our advertising rates. He said: "I was in the try crows peeziness—sekent hant clo's."

A certain chap here in town made the crack back at the fire house the other night that a man never knows his real value until he is sued for breach of promise.

Back at Henner's the other evening I saw a drunk trying to get up the steps to go into the hotel. Trying to discourage him I said: "Better not go in there. Don't you know the devil is with you." The guy remarked: "If he is he'll have to buy his own drink."

No Wonder They're Wealthy You can raze our Jewish friends all you please, they are always alert to making a dollar. As an illustration:

When County Superintendent Art Mylin visited a Lancaster city school recently he tried to encourage a Jewish lad in his studies by saying that he was a smart little boy and some day may become president of the United States.

The lad replied: "I'll sell you my chances for thirty cents."

Another illustration of their thrift. In the middle of the night a woman told her husband there was some one under their bed.

Hubby replied: "Don't make any noise. When he awakes I'll charge him for a night's lodging."

I was talking to a chap on West Donegal street the other day and during the course of our conversation I remarked that every man should rightfully take a wife.

He said: "I wish some guy would take that old hag of mine."

Even though some of you guys may feel the same way, I'll dare you to say so.

Don't forget to hide my Easter basket on Sunday. I never get to old to hunt what the Easter bunny brought me. Seems as how I'd be cured since I got my wife as an Easter surprise, but I guess not.

Talked to a Marietta St. lady today and she told me her husband is learning to be a private detective. I remarked: "Yes, so I heard. Has he found any strange men hiding in closets yet?" She colored slightly and replied: "No, I've been pretty lucky so far."

Me and my big mouth.

You know, I've been thinking, the flight of time is probably hastened by the spur of the moment.

A Columbia woman was determined to cure her husband of his evil ways, and with the aid of a sheet and a flashlight she transformed herself into a fair resemblance of a ghost. She went into the room where her "pickled"

A little man came home unexpectedly to find his wife in the arms of another man. Seizing the man's umbrella our hero raised it high above his head with both hands. Then brought it down sharply over his own knee. It broke in two. "There," cried the little man, "now I hope it rains."

That'll show him.

Of course you've all read about the wise little man who went into the bar very optimistically, and later, came out very misty optical ly.

A local business man was trying to choose a piece of luggage but was displeased with the quality of the leather when he said: "When I buy a bag I want to see some cowhide in it." Misunderstanding, the manager of the store exclaimed: "Tricks he wants yet."

"Marriage," announced our Florin cynic, "is like a cafeteria. You grab what you want and pay for it later."

REG'LAR FELLERS

THE LOW DOWN

HICKORY GROVE

Day by day somebody bobs up with a new cure for what is ailing us — it is talk, talk, talk. We go to work and help win a war to make the world safe for democracy — but the talk keeps right on.

And to add insult to injury — and to accent what kind of sucker we are — the theory boys are eating regular and plenty, and a general good time is being had by all of them, as we watch the income tax man snip off a sizable corner of our check on payday — every payday.

And now I am gonna take a hand — and do some diagnosing and prescribing. Proceed, says Henry. There are three things, I says, gnawing at our vitals. The first, is the law that makes it legal for a strong-arm organizing gent to take over labor — lock, stock and barrel — and push the boss and his regular and old-time men off the sidewalk.

Our second ailment is the socialistic germ that is undermining our strength and which, if it breaks out all over, will put us flat on our back.

And the third thing we need — it is a Congress that will get off the dime and wade in and do something about making our own U. S. A safe for democracy versus just in Europe, Africa and Asia.
