Court To Rule On daily papers thruout this section devoted considerable space to an A Widow's Claim

The Lancaster County Court Monday was asked to determine if a widow who was partially supported by her husband, but lived separately from him, is entitled to a death payment under the Workmen's Compensation Act.

The question came before the Court on an appeal of Mrs. Lillian M. Sheaffer Gable, of Camp Hill formerly of Mount Joy, from a ruling by the State Workmen's Compensation Board in the estate of her late husband, Franklin Sheaffer. The Board denied her death benefits.

Mrs. Gable, through her attorney, argued that although she and her husband were not living in the same house he was supporting her and she was his dependent.

According to counsel, Mrs. Gable and Franklin Sheaffer were mar-(Turn to page 2) daily papers thruout this section extension of the Pennsylvania Turnpike affecting Lancaster couny. It is expected that surveys will start within several weeks. These surveys will deal with number of possible routes as basis for estimating costs and revenue therefrom.

One of the most important phases of the study will be consideration of means for avoiding destruction of rich farmlands in Lancaster, Lebanon and other eastern counties.

To date, three possible routes extending through Lancaster county have been mentioned.

One would follow Route 230 from Harrisburg to a point south of Elizabethtown, then swing in almost a straight line across the county north of Lancaster, into Chester county.

Another would use Route 441 then south of Lancaster into Chester county. The third would follow Route 322, the 28th Division highway.
