I've just had the darmdest luck. So that I'd get all I wanted for Christmas, I hung up one of those large size wool socks I wore when I was up at Buck Ridge Lodge hunting for deer. Next day there was a notice in it from Charlie Dellinger of the board of Health, to take it down.

Whose got a good sized sock they'll loan me for Christmas?

It's an old and a true saying, that a sock in the shoe is worth two on the jaw.

The other evening a certain man passed our office. From the size of the quid in his mouth, he was trying to create a demand for this year's tobacco crop.

At any rate he expectorated on our nice clean concrete pavement Mount Joy - honestly, I thought he had a hemorrhage. After the incident, he said, "I'll tell the world all is not gold that glitters," as the moon shone on the blotch.

Isn't the English language peculiar? The other day a man gave me such a cold stare it made me hotter 'en blazes.
