

OWL LAFFS

A WISE OWL

Have you broken your New Year's resolutions as yet? I'll bet. Well, that's one thing I don't have to worry about. I'm so perfect I have no habits to break or improvements to make. —Quiet!

One of the Romeos who frequent Johnson's reported on Monday night, that, "I'm exhausted. Last night I was out with a nurse." A pal(?) suggested: "Fine. Maybe next time your mother will let you go out alone."

A gorgeous blonde over Columbia way is sporting a novel necklace. She made it out of her old wedding rings.

It didn't happen here, but, when a customer went into a barber shop, the barber took one look at his face, thought he recognized him, and asked: "Haven't I shaved you before?" Misunderstanding the reason for the question, the man replied: "No. I just slipped on the ice and my car hit a cement fence."

An habitual inebriate, in one of his sber moments, met a neighbor of his on the street and she commented: "I'm glad to see you're mending your ways. I saw you in church last night." Registering surprise, the man replied: "Oh, so that's where I was!"

When a Main Street young lady returned home at 3 a.m. she was met at the door by her irate father, who bellowed: "What do you mean by staying out til this hour of the morning?" And his daughter answered: "Why, Daddy, I've been sitting up with the sick son of the sick man you sat up with on Saturday night!" — So papa went meekly to bed.

"Of course," agreed a Senior girl, "there are better things in this world than men, but it takes men to lay them."

When a "tipsy" was hauled into night court the Judge demanded: Tell me officer, how do you know this man is drunk? And the sarg explained: Well, Judge, he staggered out of a bar. Then he stood in front of the fire alarm box on Elm Street and put a penny into it. Then he looked up at the town clock and said: "My gosh, I'm ten pounds over-weight!" — Now what do you think?

Had my other girl out for a ride on Sunday and down along the river we saw a crowd so we stopped. Finally my femme says to a cop: "What are you doing." The cop replied: "We're dragging the river." "What for," she asked. The cop explained: "We're looking for a drowned man." Quite disgusted, she said: "That's silly. What do you want one for?" — I took her away, but fast.

We've heard a new argument for getting a new fur coat. An up-town lady came forth with this: "All I have is that beaver coat, and I refuse to wear a fur coat that's ten years old." "Ten years old?" her husband scolded. "You've only worn that fur for a year." "I know, but the beaver wore it for nine!" she argued.

We were invited to see a painting that a young lady at Lancaster considered her masterpiece. We were amazed to see nothing but a piece of canvas painted blue. Surprised, we asked: "What's that a painting of?" She explained: "A boy and a girl making love." "Where's the girl?" we asked. "She wandered away," explained the artist. "Well, then, where's the boy?" we demanded. "Naturally he followed her," was the explanation. — Maybe we just don't understand art.

This is all a lot of tripe this week, but I batted it out in a hurry, so the boss wouldn't get in my

MT. JOY JUNIOR HIGH IS STILL UNBEATEN

Mount Joy is the only undefeated team in the County Junior High Basketball League, as Columbia, Section 2 leaders and East Lampeter, up front in Section 3, were defeated Tuesday.

Mount Joy chalked up its third straight and remained on top of Section 1 by nosing out Marietta, 21-23, as McCue and Wilson both dunked 12 points. In another thriller, Manheim Boro edged East Hempfield, 30-29, by coming from behind in the last period. The day's only lopsided score was Elizabethtown's 46-25 win over East Donegal. Chapman tallied 19 of E-town's total.

REG'LAR FELLERS

Eicherly Now Has Very

precipitate unless given an opportunity to watch the process of dry cleaning.

The establishment consists of ten rooms, each housing a separate department.

Garments are received in the main office and transferred to the assembly room where they are numbered and classified according to the delivery day. As every garment is registered a piece of colored fabric is attached. The color of the tab indicates the day of delivery. Here the orders are also sorted for call and delivery.

The third step takes the garments into the classification room, where the clothes are sorted and weighed according to weight and color. Clothes having fancy buttons, sequins, etc., are placed in white nylon bags for safety.

Transferred to the cleaning room the bags and other garments are placed in a large 140F Hoffman Dry Cleaning washer and a liquid soap added. This is followed by a rinse. The amount of time garments remain in the cleaner depends on the time cycle indicated for each type of fabric.

In the cleaning process, as the solvent goes through the washer it is being filtered. When the solvent reaches a certain degree of impurity it is redistilled and all sediment deposited in another unit of the machine.

The redistilled solvent is as clear as pure water when it returns to the washer.

Upon removal from the washer the clothes are placed in an extractor. Here again the time cycle depends on the fabric, as the extractor makes 1400 revolutions a minute, removing all excess moisture from the clothes before they are placed in the tumbler, or if the garment is fur-trimmed or the trimmings are fragile etc., it is placed in the drying cabinet.

The tumbler is one of the most hazardous units of the plant and can only be operated by a well trained hand. Should the extreme "high heat" be applied immediately to the clothes, the fumes would burst into flame. An experienced operator allows a few minutes for a flow of warm air, then high heat and finally cool air.

The next step is the spotters. He must be a trained chemist if clothes are to be successfully cleaned but undamaged. Spots are classified as wet and dry, and it is assumed that all spots have a certain degree of grease in their composition. Greasy spots will immediately be removed in the washer, but any other spot that remains, it is up to the spotter to recognize its quality, rust, paint, albumin, etc., and then before proceeding with the various chemicals at hand, he must know the quality of the dye in the garment, so that his chemical does not remove the color as well as the spot.

There are several different pressing units. In the wool finishing room a steam utility press, especially designed for rough fabrics is used. In the next room is the hot head press for smooth fabrics, and a set of puff irons where all the "hard-to-get-at" places in garments are ironed out in a jiffy. This eliminates a great deal of the old method of hand finishing.

A tailoring room is also housed on the first floor as well as a boiler room where a 20 horsepower Powermaster oil fired boiler furnishes the steam for all the units, heats the ten rooms, and furnishes excessive heat for the drying cabinets.

The second floor is used for storage.

All machinery used is United States Hoffman, the newest and most modern equipment available.

A spacious garage with overhead doors is in the rear of the building from which deliveries are made.

Mr. Harry Greiner, contractor, built the concrete block building. It has all steel window frames, fluorescent lighting, Fla type radiant heat units, and a ventilating system for fumes and hot air.

Mr. John Miller, of town, was the electrical contractor.
