As the agent for more than 5000 farmer-patrons in Lancaster County, the Lancaster County Farm Bureau Co-operative Association helps farmers in this section by pooling orders to buy production supplies as close to cost as possible, by advancing many services to increase efficiencies in farming and by helping to market quality farm products.

Lancaster County Farm Bureau actually is owned - lock, stock and barrel - by farmers in this area. It is one of the most democratic service institutions in the world.

Workshop Is Headquarters For Farm Repair and Maintenance Operations

By IRA MILLER Farm Electrification Bureau

A well equipped workshop is the heart of a modern, mechanized farm. This has become increasingly evident in recent years as the importance of greater use of more and more farm machines.

Since most maintenance and repair work can be done in off-seasons, shop and Annie Dimeler, she was a efficiently organized, year-round farming program. When emergency repairs are necessary—as is often the when a quick, satisfactory at-home repair job has saved an entire crop.
Then, too, many farm shops have be time saving electrical tools as grinders, lathes, table saws and drills.

Other electrical equipment suggested come part-time hobby centers where farmers enjoy "cobbling up" their own versions of time and labor-saving devices, such as buck rakes, manure loaders and feed carts. In planning a farm shop, careful consideration should be given to its size and equipment. For convenience and comfort, buildings should be large enough so that machinery can be moved inside, thus protecting workmen from cold and rainy weather. Because repair and maintenance work often must be done at night, shops should be well lighted. In addition to a good set of hand case—the shop is the key spot for returning damaged equipment to service promptly. There have been times be equipped with such useful and for farm use includes battery chargers; soldering irons for making minor metal repairs; form welders for on-the-spot repairs and for altering equipment for special needs, and air com-pressors, for such purposes as supplying air for truck and tractor tires, for clean-ing and lubricating farm machines and for use with equipment used in spraying paint or insecticides.
