EDITORIAL

It won't be very long before we'll hear the farmer giving his college yell — "Let's Go, Team."

Surely everybody would rather have health than wealth because nobody ever tries to borrow the former.

Did you ever notice that nearly all men will cheerfully spade a garden for bait but hate like blazes to spade it for vegetables.

For some time we have been wondering just why bootleggers don't take to using fuel oil or substitutes, but it has happened. Three Philadelphia firms sold "unburnable" oil which chemists discovered was about half water.

Here is conclusive evidence that butter producers should sit up and take notice.

At Chicago a two year study of 217 children — one group of which had butter in its diet and the other margarine — showed no difference in the effects of the fats on growth and health, three physicians reported.

This should set the average farmer to deep thinking.

DO SOMETHING

Naturally the lower income groups are most in favor of rationing and price control since they are the ones most affected by a rise in price. Some feel there are other items need government regulation, including butter, eggs, milk, rents, gasoline, fats. However, meat is the one thing that heads the list in spite of the fact we have an all-time record meat production — 156 pounds per person for 1947. Tighter meat supplies for spring is due, they tell us, to high price of feed, with farmers reducing herds because of grain costs. If rationing can offer a price cut it would be a relief and many a voter will welcome it.

CONSIDER THE INDIAN

Billions of dollars for Europe's cold, hungry and helpless, millions for numerous foreign causes, and in our own country neglect a group of Americans who are in as sorry a state. We boast of our national wealth, give unstintingly to destitute foreigners, but carry a blot on our record because of our treatment of the Navajo Indians. These Indians cannot vote, have no social security benefits. More than half of them die before they are five years old. With 24,000 Navajo children of school age we provide educational facilities for only 500. There is 14 times more tuberculosis on their reservation than the average for the rest of the country. For 61,000 Navajo Indians there is one full-time dentist, one school nurse, no field doctors. We might consider caring for our own, and who could call that selfish?

What A Winter!

A series of mercury drops and snow storms, cold waves that grip the nation and penetrate even into the deep South, leaves no more room for surprises, especially since the ground hog worked against us. The winds of late February are winds of change, their gusty breath may warm us into March, but maybe not. Things, in weather, will probably keep right on happening until green sprouts feel safe in pushing forward and the sun disturbs the snow blanket. There is a different feel to winds of February, March and April, from blast and gale and gust. Needles of ice that have patterned branches and panes, give way to slushy thaws, earlier sunrise. Those who weathered the record storms of winter, will welcome the slightest change that offers hope for warmer days ahead. This move of nature from month to month, is a slow deliberate process. But weeks move forward and soon the mulch over the plants will be removed, will bloom, the sound of the lawn mower will be heard through the land and the rigors of winter will be but a memory.
