SHORT STORY The Barrier Collapses

By JOHN ADLINGTON

THE Rev. Mr. Jones claimed that the stronger the relationship between two men, the wider the rift if anything happened to break the bond. He said it was human nature, and he liked to tell about Frank Holly and George Clyde to prove his point.

The two men had been neighbors and the closest of friends all their lives. It was the same with their wives, and when Jim Holly and Betty Clyde came on the scene, the two youngsters grew up as much at home in each other's houses as in their own.

"She's as straight as a gun-barrel," says George Clyde, squinting down the row of posts. "Sure is," agreed Frank Holly, taking a look. "But your place has grown a little. We're over about a foot too far on my side."

He said it joking like, and if George had let it pass there would have been no harm done. But one word led to another, and first thing they knew both men were yelling and shouting at the top of their voices. When each of them finally grabbed up his tools and headed for the barn, the most beautiful friendship in Reeder county was busted wide open. And no one could do anything about it.

Their wives tried hard enough. But it was never the truth was both knew they were acting like idiots, but each was too stubborn to make the first move. After the quarrel they both got so cranky there was no living with them. And they took it out on the two youngsters.

BUT human nature is human nature, and before the year was over Jim and Betty were meeting in town on Saturday nights, and sort of hanging around together after church. Everybody could see the way it was with them, except their fathers. The Rev. Mr. Jones tried to get in a word with Frank and George on the matter, but it didn't do a bit of good, and there's no telling what way things would have gone if it hadn't been for Frank's old bay mare.

George Clyde was at the barn doctoring some shoats when his wife and Betty came rushing in. "Mrs. Holly just phoned," said his wife, "Everybody could see the way it was with Jim and Betty."

all out of breath. "She says she was down the lane when she saw their old bay mare on her back, all tangled up in the line fence. Frank and Jim are in town, and she's afraid the poor thing will cut herself to pieces time they get back. She thought maybe you'd do something about it."

erly toward Muskogee and Martin, Okla. where we had one of those unforgettable experiences visiting the Kaplans formerly from Mt. Joy. We arrived at Kappy's a good while after supper time, hungry and tired nonetheless. After the exchange of greetings, Harriett assigned the task of slaughtering and plucking of several chickens to Kappy, which he, like a faithful husband, carried out to perfection. About 10:00 p. m. that night we sat down to a sumptuous, deliciously prepared and delightfully refreshing and appetizing dinner with chicken and all the fixings. This was truly one of the highlights of the trip for this writer. Kappy and Harrietta have absorbed the principles and practices of western hospitality and have given extravagant expression of that hospitality in entertaining our party. It was by no means easy to break away and start for home. But the time came in the midst of a downpour Wednesday morning for us to leave on the balance of our trip approximately 1500 miles.

We headed north thru western Missouri west of Kansas City but traveling thru Independence, Missouri, the home of the President. We arrived in Des Moines, Iowa at 4:00 am and asked the way to Dallas Center, where we were to stay with an aunt of Mrs. Wolgemuth, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Keller, who live on a large farm in a fertile farming area of Iowa. They heard us come into the farm yard and left their beds to greet us, and show us into our beds. During our stay there we visited at the Brethren in Christ Church at Dallas Center and in the Pastor's home. Pastor Samuel Lady and his good wife and family received us in a gracious manner. There were other stops among friends before dinner was served at the Keller home after which, with some time for relaxation, after a delicious dinner we set the nose of the Buick in which we were traveling toward the eastern states. The trip east was uneventful, but welcome since every mile clocked off meant a mile nearer home and loved ones. We arrived home on Friday evening June 25, at 10:30 hot, tired, dirty and thankful to God for the safe trip and blessed fellowship enjoyed with friends along the way.

This writer took a large number of pictures all in color which will be shown at the Calvary Bible Church in the near future at a time announced. We will welcome the opportunity to show these pictures to any group desiring to see them. We anticipate taking an offering at the meetings which is to be used toward the purchase of a water system for the Lupolds. This is primary at this time.

Job Of Making Farm Work Easier Is One Task That Has No Ending

By IRA MILLER Farm Electrification Bureau

The development of time and labor saving equipment for farm use is a never-ending job. Typical examples of this continuing program of research and production are the electrically operated hay hoist and silo unloader. The hay hoist appeared on the market several years ago, whereas the silo unloader is one of the newer pieces of farm electrification equipment. Both, however, are products of the currently expanding "push button" farming age. As a result, the flip of a switch now sets in motion the machinery which hoists hay into the barn mow. The team of horses or tractor, which used to spend hours on the end of the familiar hay rope, are now freed for more productive work. And so is their driver. For the hoisting and storage chore now can be guided by one man from a place on the wagon. In operation, hay is lifted, as desired, to an overhead track in the mow as the hoisting rope winds around a drum. It moves along the carrier until the operator stops its progress and releases the load. A weighted pull-back rope or a second drum returns the hay carrier to the mow entrance in preparation for another trip. Hoists generally are operated by motors of 3 to 5 horsepower. The cost of hoisting hay averages about 1/2 kilowatt hour of power per ton.

The silo unloader was designed to put another farm "hand job" on a mechanical basis and to eliminate many miles of weary climbing. The unloading mechanism hangs over the ensilage and follows it down as the silo is emptied. Curved blades, which are attached to a rotating boom, "work" the ensilage to the center of the silo where it is blown down the chute. The unloader is operated by a control switch and timer device on the barn floor. It is necessary to climb into the silo only about once every ten days to move the ensilage blower pipe down one more rung on the chute ladder, to which it is attached. The machine skims off ensilage evenly. Also, it handles frozen ensilage, breaking it up ready to feed. The unloader is operated by a 3 horsepower motor.

They heard us come into the farm yard and left their beds to greet us, and show us into our beds. During our stay there we visited at the Brethren in Christ Church at Dallas Center and in the Pastor's home. Pastor Samuel Lady and his good wife and family received us in a gracious manner. There were other stops among friends before dinner was served at the Keller home after which, with some time for relaxation, after a delicious dinner we set the nose of the Buick in which we were traveling toward the eastern states. The trip east was uneventful, but welcome since every mile clocked off meant a mile nearer home and loved ones. We arrived home on Friday evening June 25, at 10:30 hot, tired, dirty and thankful to God for the safe trip and blessed fellowship enjoyed with friends along the way.

This writer took a large number of pictures all in color which will be shown at the Calvary Bible Church in the near future at a time announced. We will welcome the opportunity to show these pictures to any group desiring to see them. We anticipate taking an offering at the meetings which is to be used toward the purchase of a water system for the Lupolds. This is primary at this time.

erly toward Muskogee and Martin, Okla. where we had one of those unforgettable experiences visiting the Kaplans formerly from Mt. Joy. We arrived at Kappy's a good while after supper time, hungry and tired nonetheless. After the exchange of greetings, Harriett assigned the task of slaughtering and plucking of several chickens to Kappy, which he, like a faithful husband, carried out to perfection. About 10:00 p. m. that night we sat down to a sumptuous, deliciously prepared and delightfully refreshing and appetizing dinner with chicken and all the fixings. This was truly one of the highlights of the trip for this writer. Kappy and Harrietta have absorbed the principles and practices of western hospitality and have given extravagant expression of that hospitality in entertaining our party. It was by no means easy to break away and start for home. But the time came in the midst of a downpour Wednesday morning for us to leave on the balance of our trip approximately 1500 miles.

We headed north thru western Missouri west of Kansas City but traveling thru Independence, Missouri, the home of the President. We arrived in Des Moines, Iowa at 4:00 am and asked the way to Dallas Center, where we were to stay with an aunt of Mrs. Wolgemuth, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Keller, who live on a large farm in a fertile farming area of Iowa. They heard us come into the farm yard and left their beds to greet us, and show us into our beds. pieces of farm electrification equipment. Both, however, are products of the currently expanding "push button" farming age. As a result, the flip of a switch now sets in motion the machinery which hoists hay into the barn mow. The team of horses or tractor, which used to spend hours on the end of the familiar hay rope, are now freed for more productive work. And so is their driver. For the hoisting and storage chore now can be guided by one man from a place on the wagon. In operation, hay is lifted, as desired, to an overhead track in the mow as the hoisting rope winds around a drum. It moves along the carrier until the operator stops its progress and releases the load. A weighted pull-back rope or a second drum returns the hay carrier to the mow entrance in preparation for another trip. Hoists generally are operated by motors of 3 to 5 horsepower. The cost of hoisting hay averages about 1/2 kilowatt hour of power per ton.

The silo unloader was designed to put another farm "hand job" on a mechanical basis and to eliminate many miles of weary climbing. The unloading mechanism hangs over the ensilage and follows it down as the silo is emptied. Curved blades, which are attached to a rotating boom, "work" the ensilage to the center of the silo where it is blown down the chute. The unloader is operated by a control switch and timer device on the barn floor. It is necessary to climb into the silo only about once every ten days to move the ensilage blower pipe down one more rung on the chute ladder, to which it is attached. The machine skims off ensilage evenly. Also, it handles frozen ensilage, breaking it up ready to feed. The unloader is operated by a 3 horsepower motor.
