

OWL LAFFS

—BY— A WISE OWL

Well, at last I can get to work on Thursday. There's no picnic today, for a change!

Two pike sailors stopped at our neighbor, Swarr's one hot night last week and asked to sleep beside the hay stack. Given the consent they settled down, when one asked:

"What are you going to use for a pillow?"
"This old piece of drain pipe."
"Drain pipe! That will be too hard, won't it?"
"Dumny, I am going to stuff it with hay." —Don't tell me if you don't believe it, Russell overheard it.

Jimmie wrote this during recess at The Springs:
Thirty days has September
October—No wonder.
All the rest have peanut brittle
Except my grandmother
And she runs around on a little tricycle, I think!

A kind hearted gentleman, strolling along the streets of Salunga, hearing a dog howl mournfully, decided to investigate the animal's ailment. He found the dog sitting on his haunches but still howling.

"What ails your dog?" he asked the hounds owner.
"Oh, he is just lazy," said the owner.
"But laziness does not make a dog howl."
No, but he is sitting on a thistle burr."

Our sincerest apologies to Mr. C-O-E-N, for misspelling his name in this column a few weeks ago. He will have us understand there is no 'H' in it.—Ain't we devils?

The bugs were pretty bad at the Willow St. game last Wednesday, and most of the spectators had seats on the grass bank. They kept swatting and smacking and finally Mianie remarked:
I do not mind mosquitoes as big as horse flies, I can endure hornets in small quantities but when they intermarry and have kids with stingers on both ends that is too much for me!

An old man collapsed in the street at Columbia and a crowd soon gathered, all trying to help and each making suggestions. An old female bar fly kept shouting: Give the poor man whiskey. But little attention was paid to her.

Then the agonized voice of the old man rose above the din:
Will the lot of you hold your tongues and listen to that woman?

The case of an auto accident was being heard in police court when a Sarg asked:
You say this is the man who knocked you down with his car. Could you swear to the man?
The injured one replied: I did swear, but he only swore back and drove on.

Human Nature: Any fault we have ourselves.

Skip says his idea of a nightmare is to be lost in the Sahara Desert, dying of thirst, completely surrounded by mountains of peanut butter.

Somebody oughta put a certain young man wise to what is going on. He says: My girl loves me so much she goes out with other fellows so I can get my proper rest. —Ooh Brother!

August is the outdoor month whether you pay the rent or not. We put screens on our doors and windows to keep the flies and mosquitoes out. Then we go out and join them.

No independent American is going to permit a screen door to

THE LOW DOWN from HICKORY GROVE

Just been reading a gas company ad., telling how our gas bill is bucking inflation. And you know, when you look at chocolate bars, shaves and haircuts, white shirts and 1000 others, it is time to stop and sorta wonder if maybe our good friends are not some of the big outfits that we been kinda kickin' around. It has been the fashion to take a poke at the big guy. The big company is a sort of non personal setup, and being more or less polite and not inclined to mixing in a brawl. And the little political guy knowing same, has felt free to throw out his chest and threaten to whip the bigger fellow good and plenty. We been listening to too many of these sassy pint size persons and electing them.

I own no big gas companies or electric stations or banks or oil gushers but sisters and brethren, I am powerful glad that there are such outfits. If it was not for a well managed and big lay out of supplying us with kilowatts, super-duper gasoline, loans at the bank, etc., we most likely would be delivering deeper in our jeans, like one buck now for haircuts versus the old 50 cents.

This coming November is going to be a good time to sort out the pint size artists. Pretty snappy epigrams says Henrey. Well I says my word I thank you.

Yours With The Low Down,
JIMMY

At Mount Gretna

Success of summer theatre productions depends as much on the supporting cast as on its main characters and in this respect the Gretna Playhouse Co. is fortunate this summer charming Lydia Clarke.

Miss Clarke, who will appear in Angel Street, the psychological thriller which opens a weeks engagement at Mt. Gretna on Thurs. August 5th has turned in some fine performances this summer.

GRETTA PLAYHOUSE HAS NOT FORGOTTEN THE VETERAN

This popular summer theatre, located in the woods at Mt. Gretna, Pa., and operated by Gene P. Otto and Charles F. Coghlan entertains a bus load of patients from the Vets Administration Hospital, Lebanon, every Monday nite. A special reserved seat section is put aside for the invalid veterans who are accompanied to the show by a nurse.

Entertaining sick or wounded soldiers is no new experience for the Gretna Playhouse for during the war the same policy was followed. From fifty to seventy-five patients from the hospital at Indiantown Gap were brought over each week. This hospital, however, was closed several years ago.

Everybody reads newspapers but NOT everybody reads circular advertising left on their door step.

stand between him and his al fresco smoked weiners. Where else in the world would they permit you to start a forest fire just to cook one meat ball?

You build the barbecue with 3 stones and a grate in the woods.

Select any tree for your birds nest soup. Add diced gruffery, some imported bumbledagg, chopped froodies and whatever the breeze blows into the kettle. And cook slowly over the week end, add a handful of sand, a sprinkling of lively ants and garnish the dish with poison ivy leaves and boy, you have got it! — You think I am kidding?

MAYTOWN SPRINGS SURPRISE

The lowly, cellar-dwelling Maytown squad of the City - County League upset the dope on Saturday when they topped fourth-place Elizabethtown by an 8 to 6 count. Registering their third game of the season, the Maytown aggregation surmounted the obstacle of a 4 to 1 E-town lead by engineering a seven-run outburst in the fifth.

MILLERSVILLE WAS EASY

In a County Midget League game, Mount Joy easily defeated Millersville Friday evening 9 to 0. Myers and Ellis were on the mound for the victors and allowed only two hits.

QUARRYVILLE 8, MAYTOWN 1

Quarryville, Section 1 champs, closed out their regular season campaign in the County's American Legion Junior Baseball League on Friday evening by breezing to an 8-1 decision over Maytown.
