illiac convertible, the only non-Chrysler product in the parade. He thoroughly enjoyed renewing acquaintances with old schoolmates and friends, and at one point in the march, jumped from the moving auto to rush over and wring the hand of a 95-year-old Lancaster Countyman whom he spied waving to him from the sidelines.

After a visit to his old schoolrooms in the morning, and a luncheon at Lancaster at noon, Keller, with his mother, Mrs. Carrie Keller, also of Detroit, Michigan, and the party of dignitaries, returned to this borough for the afternoon celebration which ended with a supper for 4000 on the lawn of the high school.

Perhaps the highlight of the proceedings was the surprise presentation to "K. T.", as he is known throughout the auto industry, of a spun silver bowl, by the 52-member citizens committee which planned the homecoming.

In making the presentation, Clarence C. Schock, declared, "Here's a bowl of silver, full of good wishes for the continuance of health and happiness of you and yours for many years to come."

Guest Visibly Touched

Visibly touched, Keller replied, "When I feel low, I'll get it out and dip into those wishes and remember the grand time I had here today."

Another high point came at the close of the program when leader of the Pottstown Band urged the assembled thousands to join in singing "Keller Man," the lyrics composed to the old tune "Harrison."

Chorus after chorus the group sang:

"K-T-Kel-L-e-r spells Keller Man,
Froud of all the Pennsy blood that's in you,
Divil a man can say a word again you,
K-T-Kel-Ler you see
Is a name that a shame never has been connected with,
Keller man, that's he."
Governor Duff, presenting a citation of "Ambassador of Good Will" to the guest of honor, drew an analogy between Keller and the other great men in history, describing them as "free men, free to make their own lives what they will if they are willing to work and to put into their work the best in them." He spoke of the pride of the people of Lancaster County and of Pennsylvania in recognizing a native son who has become a leader in his own and other states.

Delivers Keynote Talk

The keynote address was delivered by Dr. Theodore A. Distler, president of Franklin and Marshall College, who also pointed to Keller as being a sterling example of how the American system of democracy works.

"By hard work and diligent application a man can succeed," he declared. "The door of opportunity is not shut today. It is open to everyone who wishes to work hard to forget about the dollar sign, and to choose adventure rather than security in youth, just as did K. T. Keller."

Even out-of-State leaders sent good wishes to the community and the visitor. Telegrams from Dr. Howard R. Hartman, at the Mayo Clinic, from Mayor Eugene I. Van-Amford, of Detroit, President William A. Mayberry, Detroit Chamber of Commerce, and Michigan Governor Kim Sigler, were read, all sending congratulations, and thanks for "sharing a Pennsylvania with Detroit."

Homecoming Program

Others who participated on the homecoming program were Dr. Arthur P. Mylin, Lancaster County superintendent of schools; Chamber of Commerce President Samuel Deek, Burgess Thomas J. B. Brown; Lieutenant Governor Daniel B. Strickler; the Rev. W. Lester Koder, pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church, this place; American Legion, VFW and other service groups.

In the parade were 2500 school children and bands from 12 borough and nearby schools. Numerous distant relatives of the Keller family, many from Dauphin, York, and Lancaster Counties, were on hand to greet their kinsman, whilst among the visitors to the event were Leonard P. Fox, general secretary of the State Chamber of Commerce; Gen. Brenton G. Wallace, State chairman of Pennsylvania Week; and Joseph Feagley, vice-president of Armstrong Cork Company, Lancaster.

Henry Ellsworth Haefner, 37, was found dead in a police cell at the county prison. He has quite a police record.

FARMERS URGED TO WAR AGAINST PARASITES NOW

American farmers were urged today to launch an all-out campaign against parasites now — before livestock and poultry are moved into winter quarters.

Such a campaign this fall can add many millions of dollars to farmers' profits from meat, milk and egg production during the coming winter and early spring.

Parasites multiply rapidly on animals and birds in close confinement. They not only cause discomfort, but cut down on gains and production and waste feed. Parasites also spread infection, and cause skin diseases that bring a dockage at the market.

Cattle lice, mange and grubs should especially have attention. Hog lice and hog mange mites both can be controlled by proper treatment. Sheep scab mites and sheep ticks are the two chief offenders in that field.

Parasite control on livestock and poultry, coupled with thorough cleaning and disinfecting of farm buildings, will pay real dividends in fatter market stock, healthier breeding stock, and increased production of meat, milk and eggs.

LOCAL STUDENT HAS HAT CREATION ON VIDEO SHOW

Miss Margaret Kramer, a second year student at The Vogue School in Chicago, recently had the pleasure of seeing one of her fall millinery creations televised over a Chicago station during a fashion review.

Miss Kramer is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Kramer on W. Donegal Street.

A MISSOURI FEED MEET

A group of local men left here last Sunday for St. Louis, Missouri, where they participated in a tour and educational meeting sponsored by the Purina Feed Company. They expect to return home today, Thursday.

The men are: D. B. Brubaker, Harold Schatz, Norman Keady, Lewis Bixler and Walter Newcomer.

FEED COWS BETTER

More fall milk can be produced with better feeding of cows, reminds R. H. Olmstead, Penn State extension dairy specialist. Even on good pasture excellent results can be obtained by feeding the cows both hay and grain.

NEEDLEWORK GUILD ANNOUNCES THE WEEK OF OCT. 11 AS NATIONAL MEMBERSHIP WEEK

Mounting food prices, increased maintenance costs and other skyrocketing expenses for hospitals, orphanages and welfare agencies have created an all-time need for the donation of clothing and linens, which depleted budgets cannot afford.

The same is true for low-income families, now making greater appeals upon organized charities to provide clothes and shoes — because rent and food takes just about all of the meager earnings. This is why the Needlework Guild of America — "the charity that helps others' charities" — announces that Oct. 11 is launching the most important "Membership Week" in its 63-year-old history.

It is a national campaign for new clothing, which will be distributed to local and national agencies which care for sick, aged, impoverished or dependent people. Standard requirements for membership in the Needlework Guild is the gift of two new articles a year, or the donation of funds for the purchase of goods.

Ever since the Guild first began its unique charitable career in 1885, it has been a policy to ask for duplicate goods as "membership fee." This means two pairs of socks of the same size, or two identical shirts, or pieces of underwear; or 2 sheets or a pair of pillow cases.

The seven women who founded the Guild because they wanted to help the less fortunate by making clothing and knitting warm sweaters and socks had the very sensible and practical understanding that every recipient would need at least two sets of clothing, "one set to wear and the other to wash." And the kindly ladies also felt that new clothing not worn-out discarded, would serve the added purpose of boosting the morale of an impoverished child or adult.

Today there are 540 Branches of the Guild, and boasting a national membership of approximately 1,000,000 donors each year.

Once upon a time the Guild was made up primarily of "sewers" but, of course, this is not true today. Just a small percentage of the gifts received are handmade. Contributors usually purchase two or more new garments, or household linens which are collected by the various branches throughout the Nation.

Receiving agencies for goods donated to the Guild include the American Red Cross, Salvation Army, the Visiting Nurse Association, and innumerable children's homes, orphanages, hospitals, and other established welfare agencies. The Guild turns the greater number of garments collected, over to organizations qualified for social service work.

Beneficiary agencies of the Community Chest will receive a large portion of the garments, and they in turn will reach many persons in need of warm clothing this winter.

Articles obtained during National Membership Week are distributed within the boundaries of the United States, with the exception of allotments for the Philippine Islands and the Grenfell Mission in Labrador.
