SHORT STORY
The Lucky Prize
By MARION WALLS

FRED slapped the water from his hat, carefully removed his rubbers before stepping inside on the immaculate floor. It was good to be home, to be facing a relaxed evening while the storm lashed the outside world.

"Allie!" he called. The muffled reply sounded like: "where else would I be, but in the kitchen?"

Pushing open the door, Fred sniffed appreciatively and kissed his wife. "Apple pie! Hm-mm. The boys home yet?" he inquired, glancing at the headlines.

"Ralph is. But Jack won't be home—they're having some kind of banquet at school."

Allie observed: "It's too bad they have such a bad night for the bingo party."

"Hm-mm. . . . The pie smelled delicious. . . . Apprehension gripped him. "What bingo party?"

Ralph barged in and his mother gave the boy an amused glance.

"Your father has the queerest memory. If it were a wrestling match or a ball game—" Looking at Fred: "The bingo party I bought the tickets for last Monday. We have to go tonight."

He heaved. "Why do we have to go? You bought the tickets, that was the main thing they were interested in."

"But I like to play!" she insisted. "They have the grandest prizes—and you know how lucky I am!"

Thinking of the warmth, the unread magazines, Fred reflected unhappily that Allie might be lucky, but he most certainly was not.

For Fred it was a particularly dull evening. He got no pleasure at all from pushing little wooden squares around on a piece of cardboard, and certainly no material gain came his way. Empty-handed, after two hours of tiresome effort, he looked across the room to find Allie triumphantly gathering up a set of glass ash trays and a string of plastic measuring spoons.

"I told you I was lucky!" she crowed, ignoring Mrs. Deerfield who was struggling past her with a set of glass crystal boudoir lamps.

Allie chattered happily all the way home; the rain had stopped and a half moon was struggling to come through the clouds. "Of course, we had plenty of ash trays, but they'll save me the expense of buying something the next time I entertain the club."

As they rolled into the drive Fred saw people standing on their porch.

"Gosh—Allie—look! Do you suppose there's been a fire?" He slammed on the brakes.

"Oh, Mrs. Jemison!" That was Mrs. Haggerty who lived next door. "Oh—if you'd been home!"

Apprehension gripped him.

"What happened?? Is it the—is it the boys?" began Allie fearfully.

"It's the phone! The Lucky Number program! They called my number and if you'd been home they were going to give you a thousand dollars! I bet on your loss, thinking maybe you didn't hear—"

"No," said Allie, slowly. "We weren't at home tonight." With head high, she marched past into the house.

Fred put away the car. A thousand dollars, just for staying at home, being comfortable! Going in the house, he didn't bother to wipe his feet. Allie was in the living room, the prizes nowhere in sight.

"Luck always hits twice," she said loudly. "Even lightning hits twice in the same place sometimes. Why, some people say what happens once will happen three times. . . you can't tell, can you, Fred?"

"Nope," he grunted, easing out of his shoes.

Allie leaned forward eagerly. "We'll stay home every night—maybe they'll call again—they could do it, couldn't they, Fred?"

He thought of the happy evenings at home which now confronted him. "Why sure they could!" he agreed heartily. Again: "Sure it could happen again!"

He reached for a magazine, leaned back. He didn't know when a thousand dollars he hadn't gotten had ever bought as much.

Oldest Wooden School
The oldest wooden school in the United States still stands at St. Augustine, Fla., its red-cedar boards with coquina chimney and dormer window overlooking one of St. Augustine's historic, narrow streets. The exact age of the school is not known. It was not new in 1763 when Juan Elxio de la Puente, Spanish engineer, listed it as a "house of boards."

Heat Car Windows
Cold window panes on railroads and buses can be remedied by using a new radiant panel. The entire side walls are warmed, with heat discharged from metal fins. About one-quarter of the heat is released below the window sill to put a veil of warm air over the glass to eliminate the cold shoulder feeling from sitting next to a window on a cold day.

Cost of Your Letter
The cost to the post office department of moving one pound of letter mail by rail in 1948 was 95 1/2 cents compared with $2.00 1/2 by air. The charge made by the post office department to the public was three cents for letter mail by rail and five cents for air mail. If speed is desired, the American public pays for it.
