RED ROSE BROILER RATION

FIXING UP the HOME
By Diane Greeter
How to Build a Handy Shoe Shelf
FRIENDS of ours recently rebuilt their clothes storage closets to brighten them up and make the best possible use of all space. In doing the job they devised an interesting and practical solution of the shoe storage problem.
They designed and built a shoe shelf with more than enough space to take care of all the shoes for both members of the family.
Shoes generally are badly cared for, because shoe racks are badly designed and crowded. On the floor, shoes get dusty and are in the way, making it impossible to keep closet floors clean. Why not, asked my friends, have shoes where they are handy to get at and where it will always be easy to put them on the shoe trees? They then set about to answer their own question in an intelligent way. Here's the answer: They built a shelf that was about waist high. One row of shoes rests along the front of the shelf. A slightly higher shelf in the back takes a second row. Regular type shoe trees were screwed to a 2" by 2" board which hung down from the top of the shelf above. Shoes are placed on these permanently placed trees and allowed to hang in space. They then placed a 2" by 2" bar across the center of the shelf space and put spring type trees on this, adding a fourth row. If they get crowded, they can always add another row behind the present cross bar.

The back, sides and the bottom of the upper shelf were covered with an attractive, bright wallpaper, the bar was painted and the shelf covered with a gay striped oilcloth. A curtain drops over the shelf to keep out the dust.

Plants, Like Humans, Are Finicky Eaters
Isotopes Tell Amounts Of Fertilizer Utilized

Atomic scientists have learned that some plants, like some human beings, are finicky eaters.
This new knowledge, important commercially, is the result of exhaustive tests with radioactive isotopes of phosphorus in fertilizers.
Radioisotopes, sometimes called "tracers," are atoms whose nuclei emit high-energy rays that can be detected by sensitive instruments. Thus, the movement of substances containing such atoms may be followed or traced at all times.
Before radioisotopes were used, it was impossible to tell how much fertilizer a plant would absorb. But by using radioactive phosphorus in phosphate fertilizer, for instance, scientists know the amount each plant takes.
As a result, a scientist now can tell a farmer who spends $50 to put phosphate fertilizer on his land whether the plant only "nibbles" or takes a bite big enough to repay his expense.
During these experiments, scientists were surprised to discover that plants sometimes have distinct likes and dislikes for certain "meals."
For example, it was learned from tests in North Carolina that corn liked the phosphate from fertilizer for a time, then would switch to the phosphate that had been present before fertilization. In Maine, the potatoes preferred the fertilizer phosphate all the time.

In other cases, plants would seem always to prefer the phosphate already present in the ground, instead of the meal prepared by the farmer.
One of the world's foremost producers of baby foods, chewing gum, coffee and peanut-butter recently became the first representative of the food industry to become a member of the atomic research program at the University of Chicago.

This man works on an extraction apparatus in Oak Ridge, Tenn., a part of the program for the nationwide distribution of beneficial radioactive isotopes from the uranium chain-reacting atomic pile.

The young lady poses a close-up on a very young turkey—one of the streamlined variety created to meet modern demands for small birds to suit small families and to fit kitchenette ovens. Each of several of the older varieties contributed one or more of the desired characteristics to this small white variety, characterized by a compact body, short legs, long keel and plenty of breast meat. Careful records on thousands of birds from carefully selected stock were necessary before the "apartment size" turkey was developed.

Summer Milk Slump Costs Farmer Plenty
"Summer slump" in milk production costs farmers plenty in good, hard cash. On the average farm there is about a 30 per cent drop from May until early fall.
Some of the loss in production arises because a higher percentage of cows are dry or approaching the end of their lactation period, but many dairy specialists believe that much of the loss could be prevented by better management.
