EDITORIAL

If top soil continues to disappear from the farms we may have to give some of our front lawn to help out.

The man who does not read good literature has practically no advantage over the man who can't read.

Our biggest complaint about television is that we not only have to listen to commercials, but have to watch them.

If you like meat, keep out of Britain. The ration was reduced from 2 1/2 to 1 1/2 cents per day. At the price of choice beef here, one would be permitted only to smell it for 18 cents.

200,000 miners went back to work after John L. Lewis ordered a two week's vacation. The workmen lost fifty-five million in pay for obeying the order. John certainly has a hypnotic influence on these coal diggers.

Meat-w-sweet and hepatitis are in bloom; pussywillows almost open; marshfrogs are here since the beginning of the month; wild-geese were heard and the birds are having an orgy of song. March went out like a lamb, yet Easter is still three weeks away. Here is hoping it won't be too long until scuffed weather.

Majorie was bruised when a car struck her. After feeling her all over to make sure no bones were broken, the driver, George B., insisted on taking her home where he could make a closer examination.

We saw an ad in one of our exchanges which read: Salesman Wanted—Must be able to put up a '59' blonde.

GOOD FRIDAY
 Good Friday is observed by Christ's followers, as a preparation for the solemnity of Easter Sunday. The true believer will set aside, on this day, a time for meditation. Each will search within and consider his sins of omission and commission, sins which lead to Jesus submitting to death on a cross. There is found the error today that was within those who slept while He was crucified. Let us meet with ourselves on this Good Friday. We will gain spiritual strength to meet with others in renewed faith on Easter morning.

SEASON FOR MAP
 Maple sap is running earlier than usual this year. The delicious nectar, a pearl of price, is being "sugared off" to reach the market in syrup and candy. Maple Syrup is not as low in price as the folks would like. They actually compare it with other kinds of syrup found on grocery shelves. Imagine? A maple syrup lover here, suggests we consider it as a luxury with a Federal tax imposed, that it be bottled in "fifts" and placed beside a fair grade of whiskey. The price would be equal. Now, this fellow asks, of which you would prefer—a highball or a meal of waffles and maple syrup—a cocktail or hot biscuits and maple syrup? We will take the syrup of maple and think it all worth our money.

THESE REPORT CARDS
 Most of us were afraid of report cards, as youngsters, we won't deny. The brilliant student could proudly display his marks, but the less brilliant wanted to hide. It doesn't take educators to tell us that some children who can't get top grades, assume a defiant attitude. We know that report cards can be dangerous, leading to all kinds of punishments on the part of parents. In six schools in a New Jersey county, several hundred students have never seen a report card. Their teachers have 15-minute conferences, four times a year, with the parents. No fixed grades, but folders of the student's work, notes on mental and physical development, are discussed with these parents. Not only does this bring parent, teacher and child into closer understanding, but gives a better idea of what the school is trying to do. As a man puts it, the doing away with the report card again proves we oldsters were born too soon.

WELCOME HOME

Some baseball parks have started to dust off the plate and wash down the bleachers. The spring training season of the big league clubs soon comes to an end. Fans await eagerly the opening of the season of swat.

Baseball hasn't changed much in all these years of the sport. It satisfies the majority of its fans. Some inaugurations have fizzled out, other changes have benefited the game and its players. We recall last summer when a camera showed the umpire was wrong in a decision at the world series between Boston and Cleveland. A player was called safe at second when the camera disclosed him some distance from the bag when tagged. In London at the Olympics last year, judges disqualified an American relay team because of two runners had passed the baton out of bounds. The camera proved the judges wrong and they reversed their decision. Baseball rules against camera decisions, however. Horse racing is decided after the judges see the pictures of a close finish. Baseball judges the camera is not desirable nor practical, for with the developing of pictures the game is delayed and this wouldn't please the fans. After all, who wouldn't miss the American right to see the umpire's decisions. We'd lose this with a camera playing umpire.
