

Rheems Lad Lost Limb; Caught In A Feed Mixer

The condition of Jay Martin Gish, four, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul L. Gish, E-town R2, near Rheems, was reported as still serious but slightly improved Sunday night by the Osteopathic Hospital.

Walter E. Gish, tenant farmer on the Cope farm, and uncle of the injured child, probably saved Jay's life by his quick action. When he saw that the child's body was being drawn into the feed pit, he shut off the switch and applied a tourniquet above the severed member.

According to workmen, Gish was mixing feed and the boy was playing nearby. He had been warned to keep away from the machine.

It is believed that the boy slipped and got his foot in the auger and his body was pulled into the machine, wedged almost to the thigh so that only portions of his head and shoulders were visible.

Gish called the Martin Cope Co. and Norman Myers and Ellis Meredith, both of Rheems, and Benjamin Z. Miller, E-town R1, employees, took an acetylene outfit to cut the boy loose.

Dr. Daniel Nein, E-town physician, rushed the boy to the Lancaster Osteopathic Hospital, where he was removed immediately to the operating room.

Members of the Rheems Fire Co. stood by in event of fire and assisted in rescuing the child.

The Unpaid Tax Payers Names May Be Published

The farm tenant, Harold Wagner, told firemen that members of the family were heating water for washing when sparks blew from the chimney onto wood shingles on the wash house roof, located about 25 feet away.

Maytown Started Its New $84,000 Water System

Maytown broke ground on Saturday afternoon for its new $84,000 municipal water system. The ceremony, attended by members of the East Donegal Twp. Municipal Authority, was held at Glatfelter Spring, the site of the new pumping station.

The Rev. John S. Heistand, authority chairman, said the spring has been tested at 120 gallons of water a minute. The system, which will use the spring as its supply, will include a 100,000 gallon stand-pipe and 15,000 feet of six-inch mains in addition to the 20 by 30 foot pumping station.

Already 120 of Maytown's 165 families have signed up for water which the plant will make available. And the old town well, which has been serving residents for years, probably will become merely a landmark.

At the present, many Maytowners carry water by the bucketsful out of the old town pump or from numerous cooperative pumps throughout the borough. Sometimes, in summer, private wells, cisterns and also springs dry up. Then residents have to pay to have water hauled by truck from Marietta.

Contracts for the system which authority officials hope will be soon completed within six months, have been awarded to M. Simon Zook, Honey Brook and the Chicago Bridge and Iron Co., Philadelphia. The former, for the pumping station and mains is for $57,093. The Philadelphia firm will do the stand-pipe construction work at a contract price of $16,890.

Mile From Town Glatfelter Springs, source of the Maytown's future municipal water system, is located on the Irwin B. Glatfelter property one mile Northwest of Maytown and E-town road. Members of the authority, in addition to Rev. Heistand are: Paul R. Beshler, secretary; Mervin S. Arnold, G. Carl Shenk and Enos E. Miller, all of Maytown.

Farming 60 Years Ago And Farming As At Present

There have certainly been many changes in farming since the writer was a boy. At that time around Donegal Springs Frank Watson, on New Haven street, was doing chores on the late Peter Nissley farm, Dr. Elmer W. Garber, Mt. Joy street, was studying to get that title, Mrs. H. N. Nissley, wife of our retired banker, and the editor were school mates.

Those days we planted tobacco by hand, pulled the corn stubbles by hand and burned them, pitched all the hay by hand, spreading all manure likewise, never dreamed of a combine, a hay loader, tobacco planter, potato sprayer, rototiller, corn picker, manure loader, last but not least the tractor.

Take the farmer of today and see the many, many new devices for easing his labors. But, who is more deserving?

Time has not only brought improved farm methods, but it has also helped the housewife. Electricity on almost every farm to help the farmer, do much work about the barn, has even done more for the housewife. Lights replace kerosene she has the electric washer, ironer, refrigerator, cooker and many other modern household advantages same as her city cousin.

But, what brought the above comparisons to our mind at this time was the fact that farmers can now hear their favorite news broadcasts, weather reports and other radio programs as they operate their tractors in the field. Designed especially for mounting on farm tractors, the new radio is waterproof and shockproof. It has 6 tubes and a telescopic antenna.

Furthermore part of the nourishment in beefsteak or glass of milk soon may come from a pile of sawdust. Chemists at the U. S. Forest Products Laboratory, Madison, Wis. have perfected a process for converting wood waste into a molasses that can be used as cattle feed. In tests, beef cattle have fattened as fast with the molasses supplement as with corn, and dairy cows produced just as much milk.

With all these changes we are not surprised at anything, and looking forward daily to what next?
