It is well known that along this south ridge but several miles westward, near Elizabethtown, there has been in operation for a number of years, one of the biggest sand quarries in this section of the state.

A PREVIOUS PROJECT

Many of our readers will remember that a number of years ago, Milton Grove and vicinity had made newspaper headlines when a promoter tried to open an old coal hole about a half mile south of that village at what is known as the Green Hills. At one time he had about fifty men from that village in his employ.

The editor of The Bulletin made a careful inspection of the project, his object being to boost a local enterprise. But the more we had delved into the matter, the more we learned that the promoter was simply a "fly-by-nighter" with absolutely no financial backing. He had tried the same racket in southern York County. We explicated his bubble through these columns and later when we appeared on the scene he threatened to shoot the writer if he "only had a gun".

But before the argument was concluded, the promoter was hot-footing it across the fields, followed by several irate employees who threatened to throw him into the creek if they catch him. That was the last ever seen or heard of him and the only memories remaining are many, many unpaid bills, mostly for wages.
