Rotary Club News

On Tuesday evening sixty-seven Rotarians, Rotary Anns and guests celebrated Ladies' Night at Hostetter's. The event was also the last meeting in the Rotary year, when the gavel was handed from the outgoing president to the incoming president.

The meeting was called by President Jos. Shaeffer, with the invocations by Rev. Koder. Following the dinner, the members and guests were entertained by Mrs. George Broske and Mr. Willard Newton, with three piano duets, which were very delightful. After this President Shaeffer gave a summary of the activities of the club throughout the year.

One of the highlights of this meeting was the introduction of District Governor Ernest Dunbar, who proceeded to change the gavel from the retiring president to the new president, Walter Sloan. Governor Dunbar spoke briefly to the officers on their duties for the coming year, what is expected of them, and the importance of each one within the club. The new officers are: President, Walter Sloan; Vice President, Herman Boyer; Secretary, Rev. W. L. Koder; Treasurer, Paris Hostetter; and the board of Directors consist of the above members along with Christ Walters, Jno. Booth, and the retiring president Jos. Shaeffer.

President Walter Sloan after accepting the gavel, gave a short acceptance speech, and presented Jos. Shaeffer with a past Presidents pin. The speaker for the evening was Dr. Iver Griffith, President of the College of Pharmacy and Science, Philadelphia, Pa. Dr. Griffiths talk dwelt on several subjects, one of which concerned the nations health, this was truly a very fine talk, intermingled with a great deal of humor.

The ladies were presented with beautiful corsages, which were worn during the evening, presenting a beautiful array of color that mingled with flower decorations on the tables. The committees in charge were Paul Stehman, who arranged for the corsages, and Dr. Schlosser, who arranged for the musical portion of the program. President Walter Sloan arranged for the speaker.

SHORT STORY

When the Blind See
 By LOUIS CUNNINGHAM

"I MUST go to him myself, Parrish. I have so looked forward to surprising him."
 Mrs. Gerald Ivering, home from six months in Europe, had reached New York a day earlier than she had cabled her husband. Her maid held the young wife by the arm as they went up the steps. In the hall Kitty whispered, "Go up and unpack, Parrish. I can find my way very well . . . just as if . . ."

Parrish smiled fondly at her mistress . . . a face sweetly calmed by years of darkness and patient suffering.
 "Blindness made you no less lovely, madam," said Parrish. "And you could see nothing finer than yourself!"
 Parrish watched her feeling the wall to her husband's study.
 Gerald Ivering moved hastily away from the woman who sat beside him. He put his finger to her lips, then touched his eyes to call to mind that she who stood in the door could not see them.

"Kitty! You wired you'd be on Wednesday's plane. And there was no one there to meet you."
 "I wanted to walk in on you like this when you were all alone and thinking of me," she cried.
 "The woman moved noiselessly and stood by the mantle. Kitty took the place she had left. Gerald, an uneasy frown on his face, sat beside her.

"It is late," said the blind girl. "I knew I would find you alone. Have you been very lonesome for me, Gerald? What did you do while I was away?"
 "It has not been easy without you," he said.
 "You never cared for anyone but me, Gerald, did you?" persisted Kitty. "There was no other woman?"

"But there was, Kitty . . . a year before you came. I thought I loved her and she pretended to care for me. I was just a young lawyer then. I had nothing to offer and she married a wealthy man."
 "You ceased to love her then, of course. Did you never see her again?"
 "Yes. I saw her . . . recently."
 "Tell me. What is she like? Is she prettier than I? . . . Tall, perhaps, with black hair and eyes and very red lips and a soulless face . . . a sort of woman whom it is death for a man to love?"

The woman moved angrily. A different crimson from that which decked her cheeks flooded her forehead. Gerald gazed in wonder. He smiled cynically. "She is all you describe. Even as you guess . . . for I know you never saw her . . . she is soulless. She was untrue to my love and she is now untrue to the man who calls her wife. She is a temptress . . . even to one who is strong in an honest love. She came to me again and tried to win me back. But what she offers is dishonorable. I told her to go. You were my protection. I never want to see her again."

Her lips went to his.

THE woman looked at him with hatred. Then she picked up her wrap by the door and vanished.
 The girl's fingers caressed her husband's face and her lips went to his. Suddenly she pointed to his shoulder.

"See, Gerald, there is a hair on your coat. Wait, I will get it."
 He stared in wonderment.

"Kit, Kit! What is this? Am I dreaming? You . . . you can see!"

"I went to a specialist in Vienna two months ago and have some of my sight back. That was why I came in surprise. And oh, I am glad that the first thing I saw about you is the honesty of your love. I had been without the use of my eyes too long to trust the value of what they first showed me . . . that woman with her arm about your neck. I knew if I were blind I would be happier, so I kept up the pretence and in blindness I saw what in light I might have missed."
