

OWL LAFFS

A WISE OWL

Well folks, how is your holiday sunburn? Still blistered or peeling? Why didn't you stay home like I did, then you wouldn't have to suffer.

An East End lady told me she's extremely disgusted with her husband and mad as a hornet. Hoping to lighten the situation I said "Are you really that mad at him?" "Mad?" she echoed, "Why I'm so mad I can hardly wait to get hold of his pay envelope before I tell him what I think of him."

I know three wives, in different parts of town, who would like to personally annihilate the guy who put dart boards on the market.

A strange fellow entered a local grocery and said to the clerk: "Give me a dime's worth of cheese and crackers."

"Anything else?" inquired the clerk. "Well, I'll trade you the cheese and crackers for a can of sardines."

"All right, anything else?" "I'll trade you the sardines for a can of potted meat."

"All right." "Now I must get going." "You haven't paid for the potted meat."

"I traded the sardines for it." "You haven't paid me for the sardines."

"But you haven't paid for the cheese and crackers."

"You still have them. Good day." And out he went.

My wife reminds me of a candy bar--half sweetness and half nuts.

Ted Weidler, the meat man, has his truck as well trained as any animal could be. While he is in at one place, the truck drifts on to the next stop--O. K. maybe that isn't exactly the way it happened, but my stooge only got wind of it.

Did you see the picture in the paper of the woman who got severe indigestion from some watermelon she ate? (At least that's what she thought caused the pains.) But, about an hour later she gave birth to a son. And neither she nor her husband had the slightest notion that they were on the expecting list--I know one thing. No watermelons at our house.

We have heard many a tale of fellows varnishing themselves in a corner when finishing a floor, but one that beats that happened on Donegal Springs Road last week.

Martin, the 5 & 10 man, was painting the house roof and to avoid having their son follow his daddy out on the roof, Mrs. M. looked the door. About a half hour later she went downtown, and not too long after that Martin finished painting himself into the door. But he couldn't get in. The door was locked. Patiently he waited, until a lady came down the street, then he called her and she went in and unlocked, freeing the prisoner.

While at the shore a Salunga lady bought some of those new synthetic stockings. But her husband says she is very confused because they are made of air, water and coal. Now when she gets a run in her stocking she don't know if it is a blow-out, a wash out or a clinker!

That's all today, the heat is most annoying.

THE LOW DOWN HICKORY GROVE

This Senator Cain--from out there in the land of skookum salmon, red raspberries, Dungeness crab, and tall firs--is showing signs of having something on the ball.

Like young Lechinvar who came out of the west and rode off with the sweet little bride, this Cain person has the know-how. Haul out your Sir Walter Scott if you are rusty on how Lochinvar did the trick.

But back to Cain. This Nation has had so much fumbling, spending and guzzling of Kickapoo cures when all we needed in the first place was to dust off and oil up the same old machine that brought the U. S. A. so far so well.

This boy Cain knows how to get in his licks. He showed that when he unlimbered his trusty sword and removed the scalp of the ex-Governor of his own State, who was up for a fancy Bureau job--but didn't get it.

This country is so tired of what we have had so much of for so long, that this new economy minded Lechinvar as a refreshing change. The fellow must have a strain of Scotch and that, above all, is one thing we have had too little of for so many years.

And Sir Walter, if you still are not sure--he was a Scotsman his ownself. YOURS WITH THE LOW DOWN JIMMY
