CAMPAIGN BY REXALL

An estimated 400,000 inches of newspaper space has been reserved by Rexall Drugstores to advertise the Rexall Drug Company's Fall One-Cent Sale, it was learned from Mr. Sloan, Rexall druggist at Mt. Joy.

Set for Oct. 19, 20, 21 and 22 the "Two For The Price Of One, Plus One Cent" sale is expected to be one of the most highly advertised in history.

According to Mr. Sloan, two page retail type ads will appear in October issues of five national magazines, actually listing sale products and their prices. This phase of the campaign is considered to be an innovation in the field of advertising.

The Rexall Drug Company's Sunday evening radio show, starring Phil Harris and Alice Faye, ten million circulars, special store displays and stunts -- all will feature the four day sale.

Hundreds of products, including packaged medicines, cosmetics and stationery and household sundries, will be available simultaneously in 10,000 Rexall drugstores across the country.

The semi-annual sale dates back 35 years--to 1914, Mr. Sloan said.

GRASS REDUCES COSTS: Ten years of research at the Pa. State College show the value of forage crops -- grasses, clover and alfalfa in replacing costly grains in the dairy cows' rations. With good permanent pasture, the average feed cost of producing milk during the pasture season can be cut in half.

CLASSIFIED: Rates for classified advertising in this column are: 3 lines or less, minimum 35c. Over 3 lines, per line 10c. Each add. insertion, per line 8c.

SHORT STORY

Poachers Outwitted

By Richard Hill Wilkinson

IT HAPPENED that young Glen Lloyd was the only warden on duty when Chief Fred Mather received word that poachers were doing a wholesale business in moose meat up in Birchill county. Glen was a rookie on the job. As yet he'd had no contact with either the hardships or the dangers of a north woods game warden. Chief Mather decided to use discretion. "You go up there and do some reconnoitering," he told the youth.

3-Minute Fiction

headquarters until Warden Loomis arrives. He'll tell you how to proceed." Chief Mather drummed with his pencil. "Don't take any chances, son. I've an idea that Moe Stanford's behind this ring. He's a bad actor."

Glen reached the base cabin two days later. The ground was covered with a six-inch fall of snow. Glen waited two days more and then decided to take matters into his own hands. Armed with his service pistol and a flashlight he concealed himself near the tote road on top of a ridge where the progress of the truck would have to be slow. It was bitterly cold and a brisk wind was blowing. Also there was the promise of snow in the air.

Midnight came and went and Glen's spirits ebbed low. Cursing himself for delaying action, Glen was about to quit his hiding place when he heard distantly the roar of an automobile motor.

He waited until the driver was shifting gears for the final pull, then stepped out into the glare of the lights. He held his gun in one hand. The badge on his sheepskin coat was plainly visible.

Instead of stopping, the driver bore down on the accelerator. The truck roared straight at the warden. Glen stepped to one side, barely avoiding being hit, and as the heavy machine lumbered by he swung himself onto the running board. He clung there perilously.

Glen followed the tracks until they turned into a country road. For a moment, then something hit him on the head, he heard an angry curse, and went spinning of into space.

Fifteen minutes later he emerged on to the same tote road where it doubled back on itself. The lights from the truck were already sweeping up the incline.

GLEN CROUCHED behind a boulder, glad that the darkness was so intense. He waited until the truck had crawled by, then ran after it. He caught the tailboard and hoisted himself up. Two men were standing up front, leaning over the cab. The noise of the motor had drowned out sounds of his approach.

Reversing his service gun, Glen crept up behind the men, felled one of them and grappled with the other. The scuffle was short-lived. Taken completely by surprise the poacher was at a disadvantage. Stunned by the blow which he tried to dodge, he fell against the cab and slumped to his knees when Glen struck out a second time.

The warden handcuffed the two men to an upright in the truck, then approached the cab. There was a small window in its rear. Through this Glen thrust his gun, splintering the glass. The two men inside turned to find themselves staring into the gun's muzzle.

Warden Loomis, trekking northward to join young Glen Lloyd, was astonished to find a truck on the old tote road. The truck stopped and a friendly, boyish voice greeted him.

"Hi, Joe," Glen yelled. "Put some bracelets on these birds in front, will you? My hand's so stiff from holding this gun I can't move it--let alone pull the trigger."

When Chief Mather heard the story he wrote a personal letter to Supervisor Herrick, complimenting the supervisor on his choice of men.
