EDITORIAL

There was a time when the horseless carriage scared horses. Now they scare pedestrians.

Running into debt is more frequently done by means of automobile rather than afoot.

The more thrifty and industrious you are, the more heavily you are taxed to take care of the man who is neither thrifty nor industrious.

Ladies it looks as though you younger ones must move and now make room for dear old Grandpa. In an English village, in a prettily ankle contest, first prize was won by a woman of 85.

CAN'T YOU READ

A hunter who is discourteous enough to ignore the No Hunting sign, wouldn't be considerate of others when he isn't hunting. To show contempt of another's property is rude and unlawful. There are woods where homes are now built, where children play, where the residents like the wild life kept safe, because they love the woods and the shelter it gives those who inhabit it. You can't expect everybody to prefer the squirrels and rabbits in a frying pan or stew kettle. Some folks like them on foot. So they protect their woods, children and animals by use of the No Hunting sign. Let us respect it.

DON'T PLAY WITH FIRE

To many people the direct loss through fire, has not been experienced. The fire insurance is paid, the family cautioned about safety and warned against carelessness and that is that! Where fire is one of the most costly of national calamities and where many such fires could have been avoided, SOMEBODY was careless. During Fire Prevention Week this community should have fire prevention inspection where there is a probable fire hazard. If we don't have fire inspection we can check our own premises, look to the electric wiring, check on cellars and attics and gargers for trash and waste, watch out for inflammable solutions used around the house, forbid smoking in bed. These suggestions and more, if followed everywhere might help bring down fire insurance rates. The more fires you know, the higher the rate of the protection.

YOUR NEWSPAPER

The readers of any newspaper are privileged to applaud or condemn it. Responsible newspapers study the reader's reactions. A newspaper serves, proud of its tradition, aware of its force be it weekly or daily. Every newspaper plays a role in keeping this country the best and most fully informed of any in the world. Of course there are newspapers that abuse their freedom, play up sensationalism, high light the morbid, break forth to increase circulation, fail to take part in building a better community and so on. These papers are in the minority. No newspaper is infallible. Dealing with humanity it takes on the faults of humans: To mold their opinions, influence thinking, is a grave and awesome responsibility. To report unprejudiced, unbiased news is a job for self-discipline. If the finished product is an organ of reliability and industry, a pattern for a valuable foundation of daily life, then that newspaper is a success. We strive to make our many readers proud of The Bulletin.

A NATION ON WHEELS

Ninety years ago, when the first commercially successful oil well was drilled in Pennsylvania, the average work week ran 72 hours. The main reason for that was the nation operated on muscle power—men and animals performed 95 cent of all the tasks. Even in 1900, only 50 years ago, muscle power accounted for 60 per cent of the energy used in America. Oil did much to create the revolution in our living and working standards that has followed the turn of the century era. Today muscle power provides only six per cent of the energy we use, and fuels provide the rest. The average American worker can produce nearly five times as much in one hour of labor as he could 90 years ago. The result has been a tremendous increase in pay scales -- and the reduction of the work week by one half.

The oil industry has given us mobility as a nation, and the automobile is its monument here. In the horse and buggy era a day's trip of fifteen miles or so was an event—now we travel hundreds of miles in a day as a matter of course.

The energy fuels, of which is among the most important, are a symbol of the age we live in.

PURPOSE IN LIFE

An authority on coal mining, recently made a simple statement which has a great public significance. The coal industry's purpose in life is to provide ample coal, at reasonable and competitive prices. To do this it must have a good, well trained and a satisfied labor force. It must have efficient and competent management. It must have safe working conditions. And its mines must be able to make full use of the modern coal extracting machines in which it has invested so many hundreds of millions of dollars. It has to make use of this modern mechanical equipment to be competitive with other fuels, to pay high wages to the miners and to sustain its other costs.

This industry seeks arrangements with its employees that will permit uninterrupted operation of the mines, so that users of coal can be provided with all the coal they want, at a reasonable price. These objectives cannot be attained as long as the coercive labor monopoly which has dictated to this industry for so many years remains unchallenged.

Coal, like any other commodity, can price itself out of the market if it must compete with other sources of energy and if it should cost too much consumers will turn to something else. The interest of the miners—who make up the highest paid labor force in the world—clearly lies in steady, efficient operations that will hold costs down. Mr. Lewis' labor monopoly, with its constant demand and shut-downs and slow-downs, its arbitrary work interruptions is a menace to labor no less than to managers and owners. Here is a perfect example of a situation in which labor could actually destroy its own source of livelihood.

Week's Best Recipe

Minestrone: 8 large potatoes, 8 large carrots, 3 onions, 8 large celery stalks, 1 bunch parsley, 1-2 small head cabbage, 2-3 garlic cloves, 1 gallon boiling water, 4 tablespoons good olive oil, salt and pepper. Wash vegetables and leave whole. Scrape potatoes and carrots, peel onions, cut celery into 1-inch pieces and chop its leaves and parsley coarsely. Cut cabbage into three chunks. Mince garlic. Put all together into water and boil, covered four hours. Add oil when half done, then mash with fork or potato masher, beat well for about 15 minutes. Serve piping hot with Italian wheat bread and bowl of grated Italian cheese as Romanotype.

Bulb Planting

Tulip planting in the fall gives larger and lovelier flowers next spring. Nature will care for the bulbs during the long winter without your weeding and watering. Have rows or clumps along walks, walls, hedges, of daffodils, hyacinth and crocuses and tulips. Do this before frost hardens the ground. No less than six and preferably ten bulbs. Narcissus are best in groups of six. Save space between plantings for your annuals. Better have long groups of bulbs than the fat, full clumps.

HOW ABOUT

Mix grated or chopped carrots into apple and other fruit salads. They add pleasing crunchiness.... When drying celery, parsley or sage for seasonings, leave all leaves on and cut stalks short enough so they fit into preserve jars. Place in uncovered jars with the leaves down and dry in oven. When dried, cover and store..... Make a French toast maple sandwich by spreading thin slices of bread with butter and shaved maple sugar. Put together, then dip in egg and milk and fry brown, serving hot with bacon or sausage.
