"Hidden" Pay
The typical American worker in 1947 received from his employer benefits of more than $424 above his wages, according to a recent study. The study revealed that business is carrying a "hidden payroll" in addition to hourly wage costs, and that this "hidden" expense amounts to an average of more than 15 per cent of wages. These non-wage costs include pension insurance, life insurance, old-age and survivors' insurance, workmen's compensation, non-production bonuses, etc.

Flood Protection
Positive protection against flooded basements is more essential today than ever before because of the possibility of damage to motors used with oil burners, stokers, and automatic washing machines. The growing use of basements for recreation and hobbies also emphasizes the need for flood protection.

Good Tires Important
Good tires and tire maintenance are the mark of the good motorist, and they are bona fide insurance against traffic accidents caused by tire failure. By the same token, smooth tires, improperly inflated tires, tires having cuts and bruises invite accidents.

Only One Pair of Eyes
Whether you work frequently at a sewing machine, a typewriter or a machine in a factory, it's important to have the background painted in a color that does not contrast too sharply with the machine itself. Too much contrast requires the constant focusing and refocusing of the eye muscles, bringing on eye fatigue.

Cement Sacks
The paper or cloth sacks in which portland cement is shipped are securely sealed before being filled with cement. They are filled through a small opening in the bottom of the sack which is closed by the weight of the cement inside when the sack has received 94 pounds of cement and is turned right side up.

"Tree of Life"
Brazilians call the carnauba the Tree of Life, because it meets almost all their needs. The fronds themselves, for example, are large and their fibers strong and pliable, making them suitable for use in hats, baskets, brooms, nets, cordage, and roofs for houses.

Fixing Up the Farm

By BURTON WILLIAMS

Corrugated Asbestos Sheets
ONE of the modern developments in farm building construction is the growing use of corrugated asbestos cement sheets as siding and roofing for dairy barns, grain storages, hay houses and the like. Employed for many years as exterior and interior building material for various types of industrial structures, the sheets have many advantages which make them adaptable to farm use. One is the fact that they may be applied to widely spaced framing members. This is possible because the tough mineral composition of the sheets, together with the corrugations, gives them a high degree of strength. A dairy barn like that illustrated below, constructed with corrugated asbestos cement sheets, is exceptionally economical in the long run. The sheets require no painting or other preservative treatment, and they last indefinitely with little or no maintenance. The natural light grey color and the mellow shadows cast by the corrugations present an unusually pleasing appearance. Corrugated asbestos cement sheets also provide the farmer with several important "bonus" features. Made of two indestructible minerals, asbestos fibers and portland cement, the sheets are weather-proof and fireproof, as well as being immune to decay, rust, rats and termites.

Don't you hear voices?

That family you read about in the paper, with father in the hospital and mother sick at home, with a ten-year-old trying to take care of the other three kids . . .

Or the lonely old man who was sitting on the park bench when you passed by . . .

Or the crippled child looking wistfully out the window at the other children playing . . .

None of them has called to you for help. But don't you hear their voices?

Red Feather services in this community—your community—are taking care of fellow humans like these. And your Community Chest makes that care possible.

The dollars you give through the Community Chest are used to banish fear from worried hearts . . . to heal the sick . . . to build neglected children into good citizens.

Listen to those voices—and give all that you possibly can.

Everybody benefits . . . Everybody gives
