SHORT STORY On Business

By Richard Hill Wilkinson

WHEN DOUG PRINGLE signed a contract to illustrate stories for Midweek Fiction magazine at a figure that surpassed any amount he had earned in the rather uncertain past, he felt that he had reached a milestone in his career.
"Now," he declared to his wife, Aggie, "we can begin to have a few of the things we've been doing without for the past seven years."
"And the first thing we'll have," Aggie told him, "will be a nice little camp on Spur Lake where you can work amid surroundings that you love and where, accordingly, things will be easier for both of us."

"The camp," he told her gravely, "will come immediately after Mrs. Pringle has replenished her wardrobe."

It turned out that Aggie could have her new clothes and they could purchase the camp and not feel too extravagant. They went up to Spur Lake the following week and talked to a real estate agent. They had been there many times before. They knew just what they wanted for a camp site and where they wanted it. That afternoon the real estate agent made the easiest sale he'd transacted in years.

The Pringles sat down and made up a schedule of guests for weekends. They wanted to have company. This was the first time they had lived in a place big enough to hold guests conveniently. They were eager to share their possession.

And so two weeks later the first guests arrived. Doug and Aggie slept in the work room and everything was fine. All hands had a swell time. The guests departed in high enthusiasm. In fact, their enthusiasm apparently bubbled over, for in the middle of the following week some friends dropped in who had "heard so much about the cute little camp the Pringles had bought." Aggie and Doug asked them to stay over night and they did.

The summer hadn't progressed very far when Doug decided they ought to turn the present workshop into another bedroom.
"I'll build a studio for myself down by the lake. It seems there are a lot of our cute little camp, Aggie said.
"Sure," Doug agreed.
So the Pringles built a studio for Doug, a rather attractive building that added to the general outlay. Gosh! After all, I'm a working man."

"It's fun having guests, though,"

"Now," he declared to his wife, Aggie, "we can begin to have a few of the things we've been doing without for the past seven years."

He moved into it with all his equipment—and the next week-end Aggie moved in with him.

In August the Hollands arrived. The Hollands were bored. Steve Holland belonged to Doug's golf club. They were friends of some of the Pringles' friends.

HOWEVER, they arrived and Mrs. Holland spied the studio and wanted to look at it. Aggie smiled wearily. She was getting used to this sort of thing. She led them down to Doug's workshop and Mrs. Holland peeked inside.
"Why, there's no one there!" she exclaimed.
Aggie nodded. "Doug's away. On business."

The Hollands were disappointed at not being able to see the artist at work, but there was nothing they could do about it. They departed shortly after.

At dinner time Doug came home. He was in high spirits.

"I've found just the place I wanted. A room right in the heart of Godwin's business district. Plenty of noise and dust—a place where a man can do a real day's work without being bothered."

Aggie smiled fondly. "The Brants are arriving tomorrow."
"Swell!" said Doug. "Show them the works and tell them I'm away on business."

SHORT STORY The Expert

By Richard Hill Wilkinson

NO ONE had much faith in the new sheriff. The night preceding the day of his arrival the ranchers of the Roaring River Valley held a meeting in the Paradise Saloon. Mark Raoul, largest cattle owner in the vicinity, was the spokesman.
"No use in expectin' results from this young deputy they're sending up from the county seat. He's a westerner with eastern ideas an' a college education. Probably got a head full of new fangled notions on how to run down a bunch of Arizona cattle rustlers. Thing for us to do is organize a vigilante group on our own, and wipe them three cattle thieves off the face of the map."

"How we gonna do that," Rex Rupert wanted to know, "when we ain't got a notion where the rustlers is takin' our cattle?"

"We got as good a notion," Mark shot at him, "as any smart young deputy sheriff what ain't dry behind the ears yet."

Vic Stuart, redheaded, freckled, blue-eyed and friendly, arrived the next morning and announced himself to be the new deputy assigned to the Roaring River Valley cattle rustling business. Rex Rupert, self-appointed committee of welcome, looked the youth over and decided the ranchers had been smart in postponing their vigilante organization. But Rex betrayed none of the confidence he felt when he explained the circumstances.

Vic listened and smiled and his blue eyes crinkled at the corners. "Natural," he said, "for Raoul to feel that way. Fact is I have got some new fangled ideas. It takes brains to beat a bunch of outlaws these days, whether they're stealing cattle or operating a racket."

Rex's thoughts were rather glum as he rode back to the ranch. He felt almost sure, now, that the new deputy would fail.

About midday of the next day Vic Stuart rode in just as Rex finished his lunch.

"How many armed men can you provide me?" the youth asked shortly.

Vic Stuart led them to a section of country familiar to them all; the hopes that Rex had entertained began to ebb. Then suddenly they burst out anew as Vic entered a narrow canyon, the existence of which was a surprise to everyone. A moment later he pointed down into a hidden valley where stood a couple of rough shafts and an astonishingly large herd of cattle.

"No use expectin' results from the young deputy they're sending up from the county seat."

Rex stared. "You ain't found the rustlers' roost?"

"That was easy. Thing to do now is scare up enough men to take care of the rustlers, who are at the present moment engaged in branding your stolen cattle."

REX asked no question, but directed his men into a fan-shaped line, then ordered them to move down the slope. The rustlers were taken by surprise. They had no idea as to the size of the attacking force, and after a desultory attempt to fight off the invaders, the main body broke and fled.

The big surprise of the affair occurred when Vic Stuart rode up with the masked leader of the rustlers and, standing before Rex and his riders, tore off the leader's mask, revealing the snarling features of Mark Raoul.

"Matter of brains," Vic grinned. "Funny thing it didn't occur to any of you hoppers who've lived in this country all your lives that even a bunch of rustlers couldn't camp where there wasn't water. Only water hereabouts is the Roaring River. That was the theory I went on. I got myself a forked hazel stick and used it to locate water and to indicate the direction of the source. Forked hazel sticks never fail to indicate the presence of water, if held properly in the hands of an expert." His blue eyes crinkled. "I reckon I'm an expert."

WILL CONDUCT EVANGELISTIC SERVICES AT FALMOUTH

A series of Evangelistic services were started in the Church of the Brethren, situated on Falmouth pike on Tuesday evening with services each succeeding night until Sunday Dec. 4th. Rev. W. Longenecker is pastor. The Rev. Howard W. Bernhard, evangelist of Florin will conduct the campaign.

Paint Procedure

When coating a room, the ceiling should be painted first—going across the short way of the room. In painting walls, you start in an upper corner and work downward. Flat paints are applied with semi-circular strokes. Varnish and enamel are flowed on with even strokes. Remember that rooms to be painted should be well lighted and well ventilated. Also that good brushes are as important as good paint and should be carefully handled and well cared for.

Thawing Fillets

If you prefer to thaw fillets, leave them in the refrigerator and thaw them gradually. Thawing them in water is not recommended as it tends to rob them of flavor and destroy the texture. Plan to cook the fish as soon as it is thawed. Don't attempt to refreeze for there is danger of spoilage.

More Coke

Western industry has been hampered by the scarcity of low-cost coal which would be made into coke. Utah has abundant coal, but it has a high percentage of waxes and oils which hamper the coking process. It has been found that soaking the coal in ethylene dichloride will remove these substances.

Record Temperatures

According to the U. S. weather bureau, the highest temperature ever recorded was 136 degrees F., recorded at Azizia, Libya, North Africa, on Sept. 13, 1922. The record low, of 90 degrees below zero F., was registered on Feb. 5 and 7, at Verkhoyansk, Siberia.

Popular Vegetable

The cowpea is much more popular as a vegetable in the southern United States than elsewhere in the country. The Black-Eye is by far the most important edible variety of cowpea.

Canada's Water Power

Canada now has about one horsepower of hydro-electric power per capita, or about five times the proportion in the United States, and in addition has a vast potential yet unharvested.

Livestock

Many cases of nutritional deficiency in livestock are caused not by failure of owners to provide adequate rations, but by the animal's failure to make proper use of its feed.

A Better Moustrap

The proverb, "good wine needs no bush" means that a good article will make itself known without puffing. The saying originated with the bush that was hung over English taverns where wine was sold.
