 Conditions for the scholarships were made through school superintendents, high school principals, teachers of vocational agriculture, county agricultural extension representatives and representatives of Pennsylvania State College with the final choice of appointments resting with the college officials.
 "We look at agriculture as one of Pennsylvania's major basic industries and today, with low-cost electric service, the willing fast-working helper in nearly every farm task, it is clear that agriculture holds as many opportunities for American youth as does any other industry," said Mr. Oakes.
 He pointed out that Pennsylvania is one of the greatest agricultural states of the nation. "These scholarships," he said, "are part of an effort to keep this state among the nation's agricultural leaders. One of industry's responsibilities is to keep farm youth interested in farming as a vocation. It is highly important that industry and agriculture work together to assure national prosperity."
 Three members from the freshmen, sophomore, junior and senior classes received awards for the current semester of the 1949-1950 school year at the college this week. The deserving winners, 11 boys and one girl, including Heinz J. Heineman of Lancaster RD7, a senior in the School of Forestry.
