

OWL LAFFS

—BY—
A WISE OWL

A young man near Nefsville has a terrific decision to make and he is giving it quite a lot of thought. His father has offered to give him $5,000 if he gives up all his bad habits. While many of his friends think he should take it he asks "How am I going to spend $5,000 if I have no bad habits?"

Our office sage says: "Don't let opportunity fool you, it often comes disguised as work."

A Florin man complained: "I'm all out of sorts from following my doctor's orders. He said the only way to relieve my rheumatism is to stay away from dampness." "That isn't hard to do, is it?" "No, but I feel so silly sitting in a dry bathtub brushing myself with a feather duster," he explains.

Always remember -- the tongue being a wet place, is apt to slip when going very fast.

A Junior boy says "that the honor system is one in which the instructor has the honor and the student has the system."

A Salunga man and woman have a memory of New York City that they'll never forget. Over the New Year week-end they vacationed in the big city and while there one night they hailed a taxi and told the driver where they wanted to go. The driver raced off wildly and went careening down the street, swaying, lurching and giving the couple several anxious moments. Noticing their concern, he shouted over his shoulder, "Don't worry, folks; I ain't going to land you in no hospital. I just got out of one."

"How dreadful," answered the wife, sympathetically. "Was it an operation?" "Naw," replied the driver. "I was a mental case."-----Help!

I have just been enlightened that there is a difference between man's wants and a woman's wants. My daughter says a man wants all he can get while a woman wants everything she can't get.

When a Sporting Hill lady went to a doctor he examined her very thoroughly and told her all she needs is a good rest. But the lady persisted: "But I feel I need some medicine. Why don't you look at my tongue?" "That needs a rest too," answered Doc.

Up at Chet's last night the bartender shoved a double shot of whiskey across the bar. The stranger picked it up with one hand, held his nose with the other and closed his eyes. Then he downed it in one gulp. The bartender smiled and asked: "It isn't that bad is it?" The stranger replied: "Oh no, but if I see it or smell it my mouth waters and dilutes the darn stuff!"

A man went into a bank to cash a check then frowned as he looked up at the clock. He glanced down at his wristwatch then back up at the clock and said: "That clock's fast isn't it?" "Certainly," replied the teller, "it would fall down if it weren't."

Gwenie Kramer had a lot of trouble the other night. She dreamed that cannibals were chasing her. Now I don't know if it was something she or didn't et, but why cannibals?

SHOOTING STORY

Flash Of Brilliance

By Richard Hill Wilkinson

CONSIDERING the fact that the necklace was valued at $50,000 and it was not insured, Mrs. Holbrook should have been upset. The fact that she wasn't astonished even her husband, for her husband knew her for an emotional, excitable person.

"But, good lord, Bess! You might at least act concerned. I paid 50 grand for that rope. Maybe you think I'm made of money."

"That," said Mrs. Holbrook, "is the point."

"Point? What point?" Mr. Holbrook was becoming irritated.

"I mean," said Bess, "that I'm not the empty-headed, irresponsible person you think me. The diamond necklace wasn't stolen. I left it back in New York—in a safety deposit box."

"You what?"

"The jewels that were stolen were imitations. I wouldn't dream of wearing the originals without having them insured."

Mr. Holbrook's mouth fell open. "So you see," said Bess. It isn't as bad as it seems."

Rita Fenway, one of the guests, suddenly said: "But it doesn't alter the fact that there's a thief aboard. And that means we're all in danger of being robbed. And the cruise won't be over for another week."

"Of course," Mrs. Holbrook said. "And nothing could be more satisfactory. My dears, consider that we are to be on the high seas for a week. The criminal, whoever he is, will have to remain with us during that length of time. A week, my dears, will give our clever and efficient captain ample opportunity to apprehend the thief."

An hour after Mrs. Holbrook had demonstrated her hidden genius she excused herself from a group in the main lounge and unobtrusively descended to her cabin. After a moment she rang for the captain.

"Captain Talbert, my husband has undoubtedly told you about the theft and instructed you to apprehend the thief."

"Yes, ma'am. I have two of the crew making a search now."

"Instruct them to desist. It will not be necessary."

"But, Mrs. Holbrook, your husband said—"

"Captain Talbert, my husband has undoubtedly told you about the theft and instructed you to apprehend the thief."

"Never mind what my husband said. The necklace has been returned." She nodded toward a box on her dressing table.

"Returned? The imitations, you mean?"

"No. The real ones. Captain Talbert, I'm going to take you into my confidence. The story I told about the necklace being imitation was false. I've never worn false jewelry and I never shall. I merely told that story so that the thief would think his loot valueless."

CAPTAIN TALBERT'S face lighted. "And then you spoke about apprehending the criminal by searching for the imitations so that the thief would return—"

"Exactly. The imitations weren't worth keeping, and in order to dispel the possibility of having them found in his possession he decided to return them. In doing so he unintentionally returned the originals—and spared me the unpleasantness of facing my husband—alone."

Captain Talbert nodded understandingly. He knew what the word "alone" meant. He regarded Mrs. Holbrook with frank admiration. "Mrs. Holbrook, allow me to congratulate you, and please understand that you will have my fullest co-operation. After a reasonable length of time I'll announce that we have been unsuccessful in our search."

A moment later Captain Talbert went out. Left alone, Mrs. Holbrook sat down before her mirror. It had been a strain. A great strain. She sighed wearily. It was such a relief to feel that once more she could return to the role of the irresponsible spouse that her husband understood and expected.

Donegal Airport News

The Chiques Aero Corporation Flying Club held their regular monthly meeting at the home of Norman Sprecher. Plans for expansion in the new year were discussed. Members present were: Sam Balsbach, Fred Sherick, Sim Horton, Arthur Hostetter, William Risser, John Landis, John Bender, Clair Sharpe, Stehman Landis, Harold Baer and Norman Sprecher.

The Annual Pennsylvania Flying Farmers Day was held last week at the Harrisburg State Airport in connection with the Pa. Farm Show. A large crowd attended the meeting which lasted all day. A few new models of the latest airplanes were on display and a few prominent aviation enthusiasts spoke on the future of private flying. Local pilots attending the meeting were: Jacob Martin, David Heisey, James Endsow, Elmer Groff, John Groff, John Hawthorne, Phares Landis.

Considerable local flying during the week was done by Lester Wolgemuth, David Nauman, Joseph McKendricks, Harold Baer and Marlin Young.

Marlin Young visited the Bloomburg Municipal Airport.

Pilots visiting other nearby airports were Bruce Robinson, Ralph Kauffman, Albert Forry and Raymond Garman.

Other pilots took short hops on Sunday afternoon: Sim Horton and Norman Sprecher flew together. Henry Weber took three friends for a ride. Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Weaver took a short sight-seeing ride. Late afternoon pilots were Walt Reilly, Paul Hess, Frank Hassinger, Warren Greenawald and Norman Heisey.

THE LOW DOWN

HICKORY GROVE

This is a message to 96 senators. Each of you being a more or less astute kind of hombre knows that four or five heads are better than one. So, in order to give 150 million U.S.A. citizens an honest break gather around your congressmen from your own home state and huddle with them. It will help get or keep your feet on terra firma. Some one or two in your bunch will remind the others that there are still folks back home to look out after—and which is what Congress is hired to do.

As a huddle sample—take Reclamation—there are two or three dozen other good subjects, but today I will stick to Reclamation. You and your bunch should try to unravel how-come the Govt. is shelling out 1500 million bucks to prop crop prices on account of a surplus whilst across the street in another big Bureau Building the boys are shelling out about the same amount for dams on creeks and streams to get more water and power to reclaim more land by the thousands of acres on which to raise more crops. Brother.

You can huddle on that subject most honorable senators—but don't dally too long.

Yours with the low-down,
Jimmy
