

OWL LAFFS

—BY— A WISE OWL

Two strangers met up at Chet's and in the course of conversation discovered they were both engaged to be married. When they found out they were both engaged to a girl away at school, they were pleased. When they discovered they were both engaged to a coed with the same first name, they were delighted. But when they found she had the same last name—they hit the ceiling.

Definition: GRAND OPERA: Where when a guy is stabbed, he sings instead of bleeds.

Success is getting what you want; but happiness is liking what you get.

Kids can't have too good an opinion of their families if the following conversation is any example.

A little girl asked: "Mother, when I grow up and want to get married will I have to marry a man like papa?"

Mother: "Yes, dear."

Little girl: "And if I don't get married will I be an old maid like Aunt Jane?"

Mother: "Yes, dear."

Little girl: "Gosh, am I in a fix!"

The father of four children in Florin wishes to point out one merit of bubblegum: the kids can't ask any questions while they're chewing it.

I was just a bystander (?) in the back room of a joint where the proprietor was playing pinocle. The bartender appeared and asked the proprietor, "Is Mahoney good for a couple drinks?" The proprietor, without looking up from his cards, says, "Has he had 'em?" "He has" came the reply. "He is," came the answer. — — — Things like that always confuse me.

LOG SAWING CONTEST

Lewis Biskler, Mt. Joy RI, and Richard Hyatt, Ronks RI, won the log-sawing contest against four teams from Chester County at the farm woodlot management meeting held Wednesday afternoon at the Hyatt farm, Ronks RI. They severed an 18-inch green oak log in the record time of 32.6 seconds and were awarded an axe apiece as first prize.

day her small daughter came rushing home and exclaimed: "Mother, there's going to be a whole lot of trouble in the Shultz house!" (Schultz being the corner grocer). "Why?" asked her mother. "Cause," continued her daughter, "for the past three weeks Mr. Shultz has had a sign in his store window 'Boy Wanted', and today Mrs. Shultz got a little girl.

All men in favor of this, rise and salute! They call the English language the Mother tongue—because for a $200 washing machine to wash

So as not to embarrass the old gent, we'll not use his right name or the name of the place he works but we simply couldn't pass up the luff.

Pat (We'll call him), had worked for the Mount Joy Machine for many years but became increasingly lazy as time went on. His boss wanted to fire him because of his uselessness but because they'd been so friendly didn't want to tell him to his face. So, he wrote Pat a letter and told him he was fired. The boss was amazed at the end of the following week to walk through the factory and there was Pat working again. The boss went up to him and said, "Pat, did you get my letter?" "I did, sir." "Did you read it?" "I read it inside and outside!" "I read it inside and outside?" "Inside," Pat explained, "I read that I was fired, and outside it said, 'In five days return to Mount Joy Machine.'"

Who can remember back to when a wife, buying a dollar wash dress, didn't turn around and ask hubby for a $200 washing machine to wash it?

I doubt if it is just an accident that "hurry" and "worry" rhyme. And now I leave you with the thought that the propeller-driven and the jet-propelled planes prove finally that though pull will get you pretty far, push will get you farther.

4. THE PENNSYLVANIA NATIONAL GUARD

There's a saying in Pennsylvania: "The National Guard is always ready and willing to help." And from early colonial days down to the present the Pennsylvania National Guard has lived true to that tradition. The high regard of Pennsylvanians for their citizen-soldiers was expressed by Governor James H. Duff in 1947 when he said: "In addition to its vital role in the national security program, the Pennsylvania National Guard is an instrument of service to the State, the community and the individual. Our Guardsmen are on instant call in times of emergency at home. Those who have suffered from the ravages of floods particularly will recall the unflinching efforts of the Pennsylvania National Guard in rescue work and in alleviating suffering of the families driven from their homes."

GEN. WEBER

Like Constitution Hall in Philadelphia and the Liberty Bell, the traditions of the Pennsylvania Guard are interwoven into the basic fibres of the Nation. Philadelphia's 11th Infantry Regiment traces its history back to 1747, when its parent unit composed of citizen-soldiers like the modern National Guard, was organized by Benjamin Franklin as a defense against both Indians and privateers who then threatened the young city. Known as "The Associators" the unit became a permanent organization and formed the nucleus of Pennsylvania troops that fought with Washington during the Revolutionary War. During the World Wars the 11th Infantry was a component of Pennsylvania's famous 28th Infantry Division. In the Pacific during World War II the unit helped capture Makin, Kwajalein and other islands. Pittsburgh's 107th Field Artillery Battalion traces its origin to the Civil War and can boast of service in the Spanish-American War, the Mexican Border, and in both World Wars. As a part of the 28th Division, the unit took part in the Normandy breakthrough, blasted its way through France, Belgium, Luxembourg and deep into Germany. Severely attacked in the Ardennes the unit held off the enemy until reinforcements arrived. The 28th Infantry "Keystone" Division made history in both world wars, was hated by the Nazis as the "Bloody Bucket" division which smashed the enemy wherever it met him. These are typical exploits of Pennsylvania Guardsmen. The 110th Infantry Regiment, the famous "Old 10th" of 1898, gained its first laurels in the Philippine insurrection.

Today as part of the new National Guard Pennsylvania's Guardsmen have an even more important role to play as full-fledged first-line members of the Nation's "Defense Team." They have been assigned an "M Day" mission, prepared for immediate action in case of an attack by an aggressor. Officers and men of the Pennsylvania Guard train for this mission under the direct supervision of Army and Air Force instructors and with the latest equipment. The National Guard prefers to promote its officers from the ranks and most of its generals today can reminisce of their "dog face" days.

With a strength allotment of 41,397 officers and men in 374 Army and Air units the Pennsylvania Guard is the largest in the nation with the exception of New York and California. On December 1, 1949, there were 41,397 officers and men in active training, including 21,056 in 266 Federally recognized Army units. There were 2,371 in the 34 Air units allotted the State. Major tactical units allotted the State include the 28th Infantry Division, the 11th Regimental Combat Team, one of 29 in the Guard troop basis, an Aircraft Control and Warning Group, two light bomber squadrons and three fighter squadrons.

Adjutant General of Pennsylvania is Major General Frank A. Weber. He enlisted as a private in the Pennsylvania National Guard in 1918.
