EDITORIAL

We are quicker to blame a man for what he doesn't do than to give him credit for what he does.

We would suggest that ministers repeat their Easter services again next Sunday for the folks who were too busy Easter morning seeing how the congregation was dressed.

The bootleg business is booming and why shouldn't it. Federal agents seized 1,792 stills during Jan. and Feb., 387 more than during the same period one year ago. Here's the reason: The higher tax, the more moonshine. Today the federal tax is $9.00 on a gallon which puts whiskey out of the reach of many, so they make or buy moonshine.

The Litz War Memorial committee has extended an invitation to every organization in the town in an effort to adopt an extension recreational program as outlined by the State Planning Board.

Such a plan is not a new and untried venture, but rather one that has been adopted by almost 700 communities in the State in a little over a year, and in every instance has proven successful.

Probably something along this line could be adopted for our veterans. How about a try?

Hollywood's Movie Men are putting up quite a squawk about how receipts are dwindling thruout the country and it's about time. They claim television is hurting the business. Probably it is to some extent but we can see no good reason why Movie Stars must draw those high salaries when the money in a great measure is paid by poor kids who lay their last 10 or 15 cents on the cash window.

Kiddies should be admitted for less if it's only a nickel. That's a better place for them than on the street getting hurt or into mischief.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Hunger causes wars, strikes families, cities, countries, and results in death to men and causes. Arrivals from North China tell of great suffering where farm families around Peiping, are eating tree bark and grass, for food. Travelers relate of an increasing mass starvation in eleven of the most densely populated provinces in China. The estimate in China, this spring, is ten million of over-all deaths from starvation. Last summer the Yangtze valley had its worst; flood in 18 years and damaged crops have resulted in present suffering. In some areas, farmers are eating the seed rice that should be planted for next summer's crops. Chinese Communists are indirectly admitting the disaster, attempting to fight it. Communism may "lose face" in provinces where hungry, starving people care more for food than for isms.

AS CHILDREN SEE IT

Some school principals have begun investigating the startling increase of failures in grade schools and found the fault lies in too many evening hours spent watching television. In some cases more hours were spent with video than the total number of hours that week in school, plus hours for homework, had dropped 15 percent. Parents are held responsible, for they can control this. Some advocates of television feel it is a good way of keeping the family together, but they do not seem to realize there can be too much video for children. There are a few televised programs that are educational, a service for improving young minds, but there are numerous children who stay up late at night for sports events, mystery stories. This cuts into school homework, leads to inattentive minds because of lack of sleep. If television hasn't already reached into local homes, it won't be long before it does, so local parents can plan their television strategy ahead of time.

HURTING THEMSELVES

What effect the striking coal miners have had on the marketing of the product, is apparent to people in the building trade. There is a strong tendency of new home owners to look to other heating facilities besides coal, as well as householders and industries to reconvert to other-using equipment. When there is a practical choice, the coal industry suffers. Coal shortages due to strikes, even leading to national emergencies, doesn't help to develop and expand the coal market. Such conditions makes the user wary. Reducing rather than expanding, the miners are putting themselves out of more work and more money. This goes for mine operators as well. Certainly the user isn't to blame for figuring cost, service and practicality.

The Bank Plans

years ago from the Jacob N. Summy estate.

After the new bank building is completed, the present brick structure at the "point" of Bank Street and the old Harrisburg pike will be torn down, and a portion of the land will be macadamized and used as a parking lot. The remainder will be offered to the East Hempfield Township Supervisors, without cost, to eliminate the sharp angle in the intersection, for the convenience and safety of motorists.

W. Scott Bushong is president of the bank board, which also includes William F. Hoffman, E. G. Myers, Phares B. Stehman, Jesse Snavely, Jr., G. Frank Trout, Robert Good, Elmer K. Cope and Amos Newcomer.

The World War II Memorial clock which stands on the point was not mentioned in the plans, but it was suggested the plot on which it stands could be left as a traffic island, or the clock might be moved to a new site.
