EDITORIAL

Digging or lawn mowing is a good hobby to reduce that middle-age spread but so many prefer golf.

Most all of us believe in God but you wonder sometimes if it isn't difficult for God to believe in all of us.

Some folks live within their income, others about fifty-fifty while there are entirely too many living way beyond their income.

THE OLD CRACKER BARREL
Touring the land are four vehicles, starting from Philadelphia, to hamlet and city, spreading the gospel according to the Hoover Report. The Caravan, painted red, white and blue, symbolizes the spirit of government, publicizes the Hoover Commission's report of economy in government. One of the cars is a 30-foot trailer, equipped to resemble a country store, inside of which is a cracker barrel from which speakers take their stand to discuss executive spending and economic distribute literature. Backed by the Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report, a bipartisan group, it hopes to arouse more people by turning the spotlight on the reforms, on the lobbies that oppose them. More efficient and responsible administration can be adopted if pressure is brought to bear where representatives who say they are for economy, decline cuts when it hits their locality, interferes with their special interests through patronage. Personal and party interests defeat many a planned program. With the cracker barrel tour, visiting fairs, campuses, industrial plants, more people may let their Congressman know that economy is desired, even if it means stepping on political toes.

TURNING THE PAGES OF TOMORROW

In 1872, a fictitious journey by Philius Fogg, was accomplished in Jules Verne's novel "Around the World in Eighty Days". Readers were fascinated with the tale. Today our planes make such a trip in that number of hours! In another of his scientific wonders, Verne wrote of the daring Captain Nemo in a submarine, the Nautilus. It could have stayed submerged for long distances if it had needed to do so in its role in "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea". Recently the U. S. submarine Pickrel traveled 5,200 miles from Hong Kong to Pearl Harbor, without surfacing. Truth that proved Verne's fiction. We have surpassed the French writer's time in proving his theories attainable. He wrote another thriller, "Journey to the Moon", and it may not be as far-fetched as some might believe. We might brush up on our Jules Verne here and be prepared for what is to come.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

Had heard of the shortage of family doctors and the increasing old-time family type physician disappearing from the native scene. The new edition of the American Medical Association's directory reassures us this is not true. Over 72 thousand physicians today are in general practice, almost 23 thousand in general practice, with some attention to a specialty. The family doctor used to be part of the family circle. He knew the secrets of the patient, the good and evil. He knew the sources of ailments, physical and mental, because he knew the family for some generations back. You didn't have to call in a psychiatrist to probe into childhood problems, into background. The family doctor usually knew the quirks and tendencies. He came at all hours, his fee was modest, he dealt with individuals and was understanding. Not that specialists aren't all of these things, but too often humans are turned off the assembly line as machines and personalities aren't people but just statistics. As a man says, "I'll take mine country style".

WHO SAID GOOD SPORTS?

Some men's best friends are their "boos". Booging is a custom to signify disapproval in athletic events, principally. It has to be endured by many players, no matter how good they are. An umpire is jeered for a decision, a player is razed for not trying. Right or wrong, the principal of booging doesn't improve the disposition of umpire or player. Few mortals who aren't affected by the plaudits or sneers of the audience. When even the greatest come in for boos, the utterance would seem to issue from poor sports, spiteful people, small mind. Sure, we all let off steam at a game, but there is a good-natured way. The participant on the sports field knows the difference.

A BUTTER SCANDAL

This week's issue of Quick magazine explodes another illustration on how and why farmers received such high prices for milk. It is in line with that much talked of potato market with which we are all familiar.

The magazine article says: The Federal Government faced a new food-surplus "scandal" because of tax dollars invested in dairy products. Losses on a Congressional pledge to support dairy prices until May 31, 1951, can run to $250 million, perhaps more. The Commodity Credit Corp. has in storage 125 million pounds of butter, some of it a year old, with no place to sell it. It also has 31 million pounds of cheese, 260 million pounds of dried milk. The outlook for getting rid of the surpluses is bleak.

TALKING THROUGH THEIR HAT

Thousands of fishermen have entered fishing contests, pointed with pride to their catch, describing their battle with the "big one," the victory through skill. Fishermen, experienced in the sport, know that to snag a fish at the right minute, needs more than luck to pull it in. A knot in the line, a backlash, the wrong timing, too much slack, not enough line, dozens of things can happen and you lose the fish, the bait, your pole, break the line. Ask any man if he hasn't himself to blame for losing some big fish. You insult him if you say all there is to fishing is luck, that it is a lottery, that skill means nothing. He is incensed over the Post Office Department ruling that anyone entering a fishing contest is engaging in a lottery, that hauling in a "prize" is luck. It is against postal regulations for a newspaper or other publication, to publicize fishing contests, give names of winners or in any way encourage the contest. To do any of these the paper risks loss of its mailing privilege.

From our experience, if there is one sport that requires skill, it is cut-smarting a big bass. Why even perch have made us look silly! We have met up with fish that were probably on the honor roll in school. In fact, a fisherman says he saw a Phi Beta Kappa key on a big fish that got away from him! Most sportsmen think the Post Office Department could do better with tax-payers money than taking time and funds to make such a ruling about fishing, perhaps devote more thought to a solution of deficits and increased postal rates and reduced postal service.

'GRAVE MYSTERY SOLVED AFTER POLICE ARE CALLED

Harvey Stoner, Mt. Joy R2, was mowing grass on his farm, located along Route 230 just north of Florin when he came upon a fresh mound of earth in the field.

It measured three by eight feet and his suspicions were aroused causing Stoner to notify State Police of the "grave."

Police arrived shortly before dark but a heavy downpour of rain prompted them to postpone their investigation. However, later, Stoner learned that the mound was formed by a neighbor digging in the field seeking a predatory animal which had been killing his chickens and the mystery was solved.

Mix remaining 1/4 c cheese and 1/2 c corn flakes together and sprinkle over top. Bake in slow oven about 45 minutes. Serves four.

THICK AND THIN:

Skirts and blouses are the smartest things for summer wear and they are mixed or matched in color combinations and materials. Voile and broadcloth are especially attractive and in buying or making a few skirts and blouses, you have a wardrobe of many changes. Take pastel blues and pinks and combine with purple, periwinkle, taupe, black. One toast, orange, natural and black. Try shocking pink for a belt or an outfit, or emerald green belt on another. The voile can be blouse and skirt, broadcloth skirt and voile blouse. Use your imagination and run riot in color and fabric.

MUSHROOM SOUP

Cream of mushroom soup may be added to a number of dishes to improve the flavor. Green peas are good serving in a mushroom sauce, add a little grated onion to the sauce to enhance the mushroom flavor. String beans served in a mushroom sauce are delicious. A dash of nutmeg improves the flavor. Cream of mushroom soup with sizzled dried beef, served over toast, is a tasty dish.
