Navyman's 30 Day

(From Page 1)
 Members of his family immediately phoned his destination in New Hampshire. When he arrived there Thursday he did a quick turn-around and headed for Mt. Joy. This past Sunday, his brother, Joe Buchenauer, drove him to Olmstead Field, Middletown, where arrangements were made to board a plane at 6:30 a.m., Monday for the west coast. That in our estimation is a record vacation. From California to the New England states and back to California in slightly over a week.

HOG CHOLERA STILL NO. 1 HOG KILLER
 Other diseases may hit harder in some communities, but the nation's No. 1 swine killer is still hog cholera. Thousands of outbreaks are reported every year. The disease seems to run in cycles, some years being much worse than others. Just as human tuberculosis is most frequently transmitted by tuberculous people, most new outbreaks of hog cholera can be traced to direct or indirect contact with cholera-infected swine. Some outbreaks have been caused by feeding garbage containing uncooked pork scraps, by virus present in rivers and creeks, by carrier birds, or by the virus being carried on people's shoes, and even on truck and wagon wheels.

Careless or inexperienced use of vaccinating virus also may start an outbreak. In such cases, instead of protecting the animals, the unskilled vaccinator actually is giving them the disease.

Usually, once introduced into a drove, hog cholera spreads rapidly from hog to hog, killing most animals it infects. This high death loss is one of the most typical symptoms of the disease, although in some forms it kills slowly.

All breeds of swine are susceptible. At one time it was thought that the mulefoot hog was immune, but research veterinarians disproved this idea.

In view of the many ways which hog cholera virus can be spread—by garbage feeding, unskilled vaccination, streams, visitors, tires, insects and birds—the only safe protection against it in regions where it has occurred is by vaccination of pigs around weaning time.

Leather Soles
 Laboratory tests prove that there can be as much as 90 degree variation in temperature between the outside and inside of a leather sole on a winter's day.

Astaire's Footgear
 Fred Astaire buys dancing pumps six pairs at a time. They're built on special lasts, and are hand-stitched. Astaire always uses soft leather uppers and mellow leather soles.

New Corn Hybrids
 Suitability of new hybrids and varieties of corn can best be determined by comparing them with locally adapted standard hybrids or varieties.

Washing Chenille
 Chenille spreads should be washed as soon as they have become soiled. Short, frequent washings are better than an occasional lone one. Do not soak the spreads.

Diet Kitchens
 Hospital diet kitchens are using stainless steel conveyor belts and lifts to carry hot foods to the proper location on each floor.

Durable
 Cotton bales which have been stored more than 80 years have been found to be in excellent condition for fabrication into cloth.

Cottonseed Hulls
 Cottonseed meal and hulls are used as feed for dairy cattle, being rich in the elements needed for growth and milk production.

Grass Silage
 Grass silage is an ideal winter feed for dairy cattle. A much higher percentage of feeding value is saved in silage compared with hay.

Keeping Spices
 Keep the top of spice tins very secure, as the air tends to make spices lose their flavor and "spiciness."

Vitamin C. Vegetable
 Fresh cabbage is one of the best vegetables for vitamin C.

Withstands Nitric Acid
 Nitric acid is produced in stainless steel vats. Chemical engineers say the acid has no corrosive effect on this metal.

Soybean Straw
 Soybean straw that is plowed under will just about maintain the organic matter and the nitrogen content of the soil.

Corn Planting
 Of the 67 million acres in corn during 1949, 78 per cent were planted to hybrid seed. The percentage last year was 75 per cent.

SHORT STORY

Perplexing Riddle
 By Richard Hill Wilkinson

3-Minute Fiction

L. T. JEFF BOYNTON of the Union Army's Company E, second regiment, Massachusetts volunteers, wore a look of utter dejection as he entered headquarters tent, nodded wearily to Capt. Finn Lacey and slumped onto a stool. The captain stopped writing, leaned back in his chair, "She wouldn't talk, eh?" "No, she wouldn't talk," Boynton answered. He stretched his long legs out in front of him and studied the worn toe of his boot. "Maybe she's not a spy after all," Lacey hazarded.

Boynton's blue eyes flashed as he jerked up his head. "Yes, she is! I'm sure of it."

Lacey shrugged and gestured with his cigar. "If you're so sure, we'll hold a court-martial and—"

"No!" Boynton was on his feet. "Don't do that, sir. We haven't enough evidence to convict. It will mean she'll go free and we'll lose our one chance of stopping the leak. Information is getting through somehow. Alice Struthers is responsible. We must learn her methods."

"How?"

"How? That was the question that had driven Lt. Boynton nearly to distraction, had caused him the loss of sleep and wearied his brain from thinking. A week ago, basing the act on the slimmest of reasons, he had had Alice Struthers arrested, to be held for questioning regarding the leakage of information to Confederate Gen. Johnson. "You can't hold her forever without a trial, Boynton," the older man pointed out after another week had passed in which the lieutenant had failed completely in his efforts to unearth some grain of evidence. "Miss Struthers is popular among the officers. Some swear they have known her for years and will vouch for her loyalty to the Union."

"Which makes it all the more likely she would succeed as a spy. I happen to know that all of Miss Struthers' maternal ancestors came from Georgia. She herself spent a good part of her girlhood in Savannah."

Idly he fingered a package of letters that he brought in with him. "I'm convinced that in these letters the girl is sending out the information. How, I don't know. Certainly she is using no code. I have checked every letter a dozen times. Purposely I have permitted each to be mailed. Events immediately following convince me that some how those letters are the means of conveying the information."

CAPT. LACEY picked up the letters and read them briefly. They contained nothing to excite suspicion—mere messages of love and devotion to friends in the South.

Lacey suddenly pounded the table. "By George, Boynton, I believe I have it! Obviously something has to be done, and I'm more than half convinced—though heaven knows why—that your suspicions are well founded."

"So?"

"So we'll deport her. Turn her over to the Confederate army. If that stops the leakage we'll know she was the guilty party, and there will no longer be danger of its continuance."

"And it will mean Alice Struthers' complete freedom."

Two days later prisoner Alice Struthers was turned over to Confederate Gen. Johnson under a flag of truce.

But it wasn't until after the war had ended that he found the answer to the riddle. One day while going through his relics of long ago battles he came upon a letter. It was one that Alice Struthers had written to her friends in the South, and which he had kept for a souvenir.

The paper was yellow, the ink faded. The postage stamp had dried and was hanging by a mere thread. As he looked at it, Lt. Boynton's eyes grew wide. For beneath the stamp were some closely written, finely penned words, obviously the cipher employed by Alice Struthers which he had tried so hard to locate.
